Application deadline extended for Whispering Pines lottery

By STEPHEN BJORK
WILMINGTON - The deadline for applications for one of 14 affordable units available at Whispering Pines on Salem Street has been extended until August 28th. Those Wilmington residents, past or present, meeting eligibility requirements are not likely to find a lottery offering better odds. To sweeten the pot, the lottery is even open to Town employees not residing in Wilmington and to relatives of Wilmington residents.

According to Kristen Costa of L.A. Associates, the licensing agent for the project, the deadline has been extended for a simple reason - there are currently more units available than there are applicants vying for spots.

Whispering Pines is a 48-unit condominium development currently under construction at 195 Salem Street. All units include two bedrooms and two bathrooms, and at least one member of each household within the development must be at or above the age of 55.

The units to be sold at market rate are listed at between $349,900 and $384,900, but, as an aspect of the State's Local Initiative Program, 14 affordable units will be available for purchase through the lottery process. Affordable units, list-

Local man guilty in weapons theft

Gets 3 years, still faces a possible 10 years

By STEPHEN BJORK
WILMINGTON - Closure has finally been brought to a case solved nearly four years ago by Wilmington detectives. On Friday, David Forster, 40, of 6 Stonehedge Drive in Wilmington, received a preliminary sentencing of three years and a day in MCI Cedar Junction, a maximum-security prison in Walpole, for the 2002 theft of 15 firearms, including an AK-47 assault rifle, and $30,000 worth of jewelry from a home in Wilmington.

Forster was remanded to state custody immediately following the sentencing. He was found guilty by a jury in Cambridge Superior Court on 19 federal indictments ranging from the unlawful possession of firearms to breaking and entering a residence during the daytime. Forster is expected to face another round of sentencing, following a 30-day appeal process, on September 28th and could face more than 10 years in prison.

On November 20, 2002, between the hours of 3:00 p.m. and 10:00 p.m., the jewelry and cache of weapons was stolen from a Hamlin Lane home. According to Inspector Thomas Miller, all of the weapons were registered and legal. The homeown-

Bent, but not broken

A first-person account of the St. Thomas Parish contribution to Katrina relief

By CHRISTOPHER NEVILLE

By their nature, volunteers can be saviors or they can be a distraction depending on their levels of expertise. While the residents of the gulf coast are truly appreciative of all of the relief efforts there remains a dire need for qualified contractors, electricians, and plumbers. As with many volunteer projects, the quality and quantity of the work is reflected by the knowledge and proficiency of everyone who works on the project. The work started at Ann Humphrey's house was no exception.

Ann Humphrey is an "older" woman who lived in an 80 year-old "shotgun house" in an industrial section of Biloxi about a mile from the beach. A very devout Southern Baptist, she lost all of her worldly possessions with the exception of two family pictures that hung on a wall of her flooded house. She spent the hurricane in the attic of her niece's house a mile away. As the water level rose to the ceiling of that house she passed out and fell into a heat related coma. The water level in her own neighborhood probably reached about seven to eight feet high and her house was completely ruined. Without any insurance, the retired, disabled former cook at Keesler Air Force base was settled in a temporary FEMA trailer wondering what she would do when the time came to give up the trailer. She approached the Disaster Services housed at the Methodist Church and by the beginning of June construction was begun on her new home.

One of the building inspectors had noticed that the floor insulation in Ann's house had been installed upside down. He also noticed that the previous group had not put enough nails into the siding, and they hadn't properly tied down the roof...all things that had to be addressed during the week we worked on the house.

Dave Travis led a crew of 4-7 people each day as the different stages of work were completed however the inspector didn't come back until Thursday...too late to fully insulate and sheetrock. Ann's house will have to await the next group of volunteers. But she is appreciative and patient! And she'll have gorgeous pressure-treated latticework surrounding her house when it is finished.

Lauralei Ladner's house had water as high as her roof. At least it was structurally sound although everything inside was ruined, including the walls and woodwork. On Tuesday morning, among other tasks, Bob Troy and his crew had the task of figuring out how to put a 103" base kitchen cabinet into a 99" space. Fortunately, Bob is a contractor - and a pretty creative one at that. His re-design allowed Lauralei the opportunity to include a small dishwasher as part of her new home.

Lauralei, who suffers from Parkinson's Disease, recently underwent a kidney transplant and lives alone. She has lived through three devastating hurricanes, 1947, Camille in 1969 and Katrina. Although she evacuated during this most recent hurricane she told the story of elderly neighbors who did not evacuate. When the water started rushing in the windows the woman next door climbed through a window and climbed up onto the roof. Her husband however could not get out the window. As the water continued to rise toward the ceiling her husband began to tread water and his wife told him she was coming down off the roof to join him so they would die together. As the water rose to their chins they began to pray the Lord's Prayer. Miraculously the water gradually began to recede and they survived.

Believe it or not, but Deacon King and Fr. Earley are actually quite handy with wiring projects...except when the old wiring is not marked by color code. During an electric range installation in an apartment at the Salvation Army they had their own "space issue." While trying to put a 30-inch range into a 29 15/16" space someone(?) touched the wrong wire and two 120 volt wires abruptly went to ground and caused a rather large blue spark nearly blowing the breaker panel off the wall. They were thrown into darkness and warmth. Alas...their only opportunity to work

Connecting towns...and history

Original New Boston Street Bridge built 175 years ago

LARZ F. NEILSON
WILMINGTON - After an absence of nearly 30 years, it seems that there will again be a bridge connecting Woburn Street, Wilmington to New Boston Street, Woburn. There had always been a bridge there, ever since the Boston and Lowell Railroad was built 175 years ago.

The bridge was a secondary link between Wilmington and Woburn, linking two industrial areas. Subsequent development has changed the patterns of travel in the area.

The B&L was one of the earliest railroads in the United States. That railroad line became part of the Boston and Maine, and is now part of the MBTA system. It is believed to be the oldest rail line still in operation in the U.S.

At the time the railroad was built in the early 1830s, the trustees opted to have bridges built to avoid grade-crossing accidents. And for more than a century, the bridges held up, carrying horses and wagons safely over the tracks. Then as auto traffic increased both in speed and volume, the old bridges became hazardous. They simply were not designed to carry 20th Century traffic

The bridge succumbed to a fire shortly after this photograph was taken and has remained in ruins since. Approvals granted for JT Berry site

406 apartments, under Chapter 40R, planned next to Wilmington

By MAUREEN G. DOHERTY

NORTH READING - Lincoln Properties, developers of the 406-unit apartment complex proposed for a portion of the former J.T. Berry state hospital site in North Reading, near the Wilmington town line, anticipated receiving approval from two town boards on Tuesday.

Although several acres of the J.T. Berry site are within Wilmington, the apartment component of the site is situated entirely in North Reading. The site at 100 Lowell Road (Rt. 62) is across the street from Benevento Sand and Gravel, which also straddles both communities. A decision on the permit under the state's Chapter 40R Smart Growth statute had been expected at the Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) meeting on Thursday, August 17; however, due to a lack of a quorum of the board, the public hearing became a workshop. The ZBA immediately posted a meeting notice for a new public hearing to be held on Tuesday, August 22 at 4:00 p.m. Decisions of the three-member ZBA must be unanimous, but only two members were available for the August 17 meeting. ZBA Chairman Paul O'Leary held the workshop to enable the applicants to update the board on their progress to date.

The ZBA did pass the 40R overlay district on Tuesday afternoon. Subcommittee endorsement received

This progress included receiving a favorable endorsement for the project by the J.T. Berry Center Subcommittee on August 9. The subcommittee, which was appointed by the ZBA last fall and includes all town department heads as well as members of the town's elected and appointed boards, has met every other week with Lincoln Properties to reach this point in its deliberations. August 22 was a busy day for the applicants as they also returned to the town's Conservation Commission at 8:30 p.m. They applied for an Order of Conditions governing wetlands alterations on the Brownie Troop 1575 of Tewksbury and their families enjoyed a tour of Boston by land and by water on the Boston Duck Tour. This fun outing was made possible by the generous donation of Jomo Mapie, Doug Bernard, Frank Toney, Tresha Farrell and Madonna Kenny of Tewksbury's Raytheon's REA Committee. To reciprocate Raytheon's generosity, each of the girls wrote letters to soldiers in Iraq which accompanied a care package. Thank you Raytheon!

GIVE AWAY THE HOUSE —AND LIVE IN IT!

For many families today, the family home represents the largest single asset in the portfolio. As real estate prices escalate, people find themselves in estate brackets they never imagined.

One way to shelter the property from higher estate taxes is to put it into a Qualified Personal Residence Trust. This lets the owners give the property to their children (or whomever) for less than its current valuation and continue to live in it. (The longer the trust term, the better the deal for tax purposes.) At the end of the trust, the parents must pay fair-market rent—yet another way to transfer wealth. This works for vacation homes, too.

The downside is that the children inherit the house with original basis, resulting in higher capital gains when it is sold. If the parent or parents die before the trust term is over, the whole trust exercise is invalidated: they inherit it at the current value, but they owe estate taxes on the property at that value.

Estate planning requires tax know-how. That's our specialty at:

Tewksbury voter registration session for the state primary

A voter registration session has been scheduled for Wednesday, August 30, 2006, from 8:30 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. at the Town Clerk's Office, Town Hall. Elizabeth Carey, Town Clerk, informs residents, who have not registered to vote, that this is the final day to register to vote for the upcoming September State Primary. This is the last day to change your political party enrollment for the upcoming September State Primary. Residents who will be 18 years of age on or before Tuesday, September 19, 2006 are eligible to register to vote at this session. Proof of age is required. Residents may register to vote during regular Town Clerk Office hours, Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Tuesday evening from 1:00 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. or phone 978-640-4355 and we will mail you a mail-in voter registration form. The mail-in registration form must be postmarked on or before Wednesday, August 30, or hand delivered to the Town Clerk's office before 8:00 p.m. on Wednesday, August 30, in order for you to be eligible to vote at the upcoming September State Primary Election. August 30 is the last day to change your Political Party enrollment. If you are unsure of your voter enrollment, please phone the Town Clerk's Office at 978-640-4355 for verification. To change your party enrollment, a voter must personally sign a written request or sign a Change of Party Enrollment Card to show the new party affiliation that they wish to declare or if they wish to change to an un-enrolled status (not enrolled in a political party / independent). Voters who are registered to vote as un-enrolled (commonly called Independent) may declare at the September State Primary whether they want a Democratic party ballot OR a Republican party ballot.

Voters registered as a Democrat shall only receive a Democratic ballot, voters registered as a Republican shall only receive a Republican ballot. These are the two official Political Parties in Massachusetts. For the State Primary election, if an un-enrolled voter selects a party ballot the un-enrolled voter need not fill out a Change of Party Enrollment Card, the un-enrolled voter will automatically revert back to their un-enrolled status. Please phone the Town Clerk's Office at 918-640-4355, Monday to Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. or Tuesday evening from 7:00 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., to verify your voting status.

Quick Health Tips

by Dr. Leslee Quick

Vacations

This article is for every working (yes, that means stay-at-home) parent who doesn't have a full time cook, cleaning person, landscaping person or nanny. But it relates to just about any human on the planet.

I recently returned from a short, five-day trip to Maine with another family, which included three children between the ages of three and seven. I really enjoy our trips together, playing with the kids, days at Story Land, breaking up confrontations with corner time. The only time I spent alone with my husband was when we were snoring, I mean snoozing. And for three nights either my sneaky three year old daughter climbed into bed or I slept with her because I liked her bed better. I came home feeling like I needed a vacation.

Then a few weeks back, I was having a conversation with a girlfriend who said she won't leave her children and her idea of a vacation was ten days at Disney World. For a millisecond, the comment made me feel a pang of guilt like I was a bad mother for contemplating any non-children time. Don't get me wrong, I can whoop it up with Mickey with the best of them, but relaxing isn't the first thing that pops into my head when the words Disney World pop up. Then I read stories about parents who turn to anti-depressants or become closet alcoholics and I realize that I can handle the differences of opinion. I also realize what is right for me isn't always right for the next person. While I love taking trips with my daughter I also realize that what makes me the "supermom" I want to be - or just the best darn mom I can - takes decompression time.

So to all parents out there who feel guilt for those same, sinful thoughts I tell you...feel not my friends! We all need "me" time for sanity and health purposes. Vacations are not only a fun diversion but a way to recharge the body and mind. They are essential for mental and physical health.

So what is a vacation? It stems from the word vacate, which means to leave or empty out. As I mentioned previously, ideas of vacation may differ but they should all have the same psychological basics. So whatever you decide is your type of vacation, make sure it as relaxing as possible.

First, you need to understand what helps you to decompress. If there are obstacles in the way, get around them as best as you can. If Disney World is truly your idea of a relaxing vacation and you have children you may want to think of having other family around to take turns watching the kids. Otherwise, chances are you aren't actually vacationing.

The same goes for those who don't have children and are married to the office. You need to separate "trip" from vacation because they are not the same. For goodness sake, turn off the cell phone and computer, which keeps us constantly attached to our work. In fact, don't bring them at all. Only keep numbers for family to reach you and vice versa.

I made the mistake last year for my anniversary vacation with my husband. I called the office from my chair on the beach in St. Lucia. After a brief talk with my assistant and covering doctor, I sat for the next two hours thinking of work as I was trying to drink my purple mojo something or other and read Harry Potter. Stress instantly set in and it took hours before I was able to get back into true vacation mode. Luckily I was away for seven days. And when I returned, I was a relaxed, more in-tuned mother. Getting charged $6 for being late to Daycare/preschool because my daughter lost her shoe at the last minute just didn't upset me. Two weeks before I would have charged the piggy bank - just kidding.

Once you have figured out what your body needs to relax be sure to give yourself a minimum of three days to actually do so as this is the average time it takes for the body to reset and reorganize. Studies show that three days of rest can be felt for up to five weeks of time. The more non-stressful vacation days people had, the better they felt.

This advice rings true for working parents and non-parents alike, as well as stay-at-home mothers, who probably need it more than any CEO out there.

Let's not forget the proven health benefits of relaxation. A nine-year study tracked 12,000 men at risk for heart disease and showed that those who take frequent vacations are thirty percent less likely to die of heart disease than those who did not. Other recent evidence shows that women who take vacations at least twice a year are fifty percent less likely to die of a heart attack. And if you ask me, the divorce rate would be less.

If you read this article regularly, you may remember my belaboring the affects uninterrupted stress has on the body - emotionally and physically. Without emotional decompression, stress wreaks havoc with musculoskeletal pain, creates digestive disturbances, poor sleep quality, worsening moods, decreases immunity, the list goes on and on. And now, rather than turning to drugs, many people turn to complimentary alternative medicine doctors and practitioners such as myself.

My practice is constantly filled with stressed people. It's no coincidence that people feel better emotionally and physically after a well-rested vacation. I generally find less subluxations and physical issues with my patients after a relaxing vacation. I would say forty percent of my practice patients are stressed individuals who rely on me to keep their bodies in check.

Unfortunately, as much of a superpower that we are, we are also among the most stressed and sickly. We may be the only developed country that does not mandate minimum vacation times. In many European countries workers get five weeks of vacation. Laws mandate a minimum of two weeks vacation in Canada and Japan. And in the European Union countries get four weeks of paid vacation by law. Many employees in the U.S. need to work at a job more than a year before getting the conventional two weeks vacation, and the law does not mandate that. This is yet another reason I call the U.S. the land of the free and home of the stressed.

So, parents everywhere, the morale to my story is simple...don't feel badly if you want to take a vacation away from it all. Our bodies need relaxation. If you can't afford to travel far, than travel anywhere your body can take you. Go camping for goodness sake. It's peaceful and cheap. Try to schedule a trip with the kids and then a vacation for yourself. Some health professionals say that staying home is the same. But I say nay. Don't take all your vacations at home. I can't be home without feeling like I should be cleaning, doing laundry or some house project. The guilt is overwhelming. So enjoy getting out and don't feel guilty. You'll have plenty of time for that after you come back stress-free, feeling rested and ready to take on your beautiful, loving children, and all your hectic schedules. You will even find your parenting more fulfilling with the time off.

So kick the laptop and cell phone to the curb, and take a break. Heck, bring a sitter with you on vacation if the kids are around, anything to allow you some decompression time. As it is, you're probably spending a good chunk of change on this vacation so relax and do something beneficial for your health at the same time.

In conclusion, our children are our most precious joys. They deserve the best from us. Yet, with all that goes on in our lives as it is, a trip with the kids does not necessarily mean vacation. We all require different means to vacate from our daily stresses and you need to heed them. Your health is worth it.

Here's to your health...naturally.

Top 10 Reasons U25 Should Be Supported

To the Editor,
U25 is working hard for the Tewksbury Community. Unfortunately, we have a few who criticize our methods, specifically our library article. While we realize the importance of our town's library accreditation, we are focused on maintaining the accreditation of the High School.

The New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC) placed the High School on WARNING for the Standards of Curriculum, School Resources for Learning, and Community Resources and Learning.

Listed below are 9 NEASC concerns leading to the warning status (*NEASC letter dated 4/24/06) and 10 reasons you should support the U25 efforts. We are actively working to support and resolve these concerns to ensure our High School continues to be accredited.

10. Significant number of overcrowded classes (Curriculum Standard)*

9. Reduction in the number of elective course offerings which limit the learning opportunities students have (Curriculum Standard)*

8. Average class size of thirty or more students - limiting the use of a range of instructional strategies. (Curriculum Standard)*

7. Negative impact of part time status of school's only certified media specialist who is away from the high school two days a week (School Resources for Learning)*

6. Caseload of over three hundred students for each of the full time guidance counselors. (School Resources for Learning)*

5. Negative impact on the delivery of programs & services resulting from the increased number of special education students with no proportionate increase to professional staffing levels. (School Resources for Learning)*

4. Practice of teachers sharing classrooms due to space constraints resulting from increased enrollments. (Community Resources for Learning)*

3. Number of undersized classrooms. (Community Resources for Learning)*

2. Inadequate level of funding to provide and maintain a comprehensive program of studies, co-curricular activities and sufficient staffing levels. (Community Resources for Learning)*

And the number one reason to support U25 is...

1. Because our students and community deserve a high school which is not on WARNING!

In difficult financial times, we all have to prioritize. We feel education must be prioritized second only to the safety of our community.

Sincerely,
Joseph E. Russell

Standing Eight Count

by Stephen Bjork

Have you ever been forced into a conversation with a person whose breath is so bad your knees turn to jelly and you find yourself praying for someone to end your suffering with a merciful lead pipe to the back of your head? That's a rough situation with few opportunities for a graceful exit.

Why is it that Bad Breath People (BBP) always need to tell you something in confidence? It never fails. They do a quick scan of the room and then lean in good and close to tell you a secret. Your ear magically becomes a direct conduit to your olfactory organs, immediately triggering a gag reflex.

"Hey buddy, just back up a step or two and jot it down on a piece of paper, will ya? How many onion and horseradish sandwiches can one person eat in a day anyway?"

Ever offer a BBP a mint, or a nice refreshing stick of Big Red, only to have them refuse? How are you supposed to react in that sticky situation?

It starts out nice and subtle. You absent mindedly take out a pack of gum and pop a piece in your mouth and then, as nothing more than an afterthought of course, offer the BBP a piece.

"Stick of gum?" you ask nonchalantly.

"No thanks," the idiot replies.

"What can you possibly say next?"

"Please?"

I have a deep seeded fear of having bad breath. Plenty of people seem to be blissfully unaware that their own stank-breath is nasty enough to warrant a quarantine. How do I know that I don't get bad breath from time to time? I do drink a lot of coffee and, let's face it; there is no market out there for coffee flavored toothpaste.

My fear has created a nearly fanatical compulsion regarding my own personal oral hygiene. I am never without mints or gum on my person and I brush my teeth religiously twice a week.

As soon as I become involved in a conversation, especially with a stranger or casual acquaintance, I get the FEAR. Do I have bad breath right now? When was the last time I had a mint? Did he just grimace a little bit when I spoke? Are her eyes beginning to water?

I get so paranoid that I start trying to aim my breath away from their face without actually moving my head. This, no doubt, results in some very odd looking mouth contortions. I've seen smokers do this. Have you ever seen someone smoking a cigarette and conversing with a non-smoker? They look ridiculous in their attempt at nonchalance. They inhale the smoke and, while still maintaining eye contact, they exhale the smoke off to the side or straight down. Can you picture that? Okay, now picture me doing that, but with no smoke.

It is well documented that garlic breath is most unpleasant, but at the very least, that particular pungency can be linked with some sort of food product. The other day I got stuck in close quarters with a guy whose breath smelled like he'd been storing a dead raccoon in his mouth for the last couple of weeks.

I'm not kidding. How else in the world could such a rancid odor be created? How many dentists has he killed during the course of his lifetime?

I was smiling when I first saw him come into the room. He's a good guy and I hadn't seen him for years. My reaction, when first struck by the sledgehammer of stench, was undoubtedly visible, but he seemed not to take notice. Good God, it was all I could do to keep my food down.

It was obvious that he wanted to spend some time catching up and I couldn't see any way out of it. His breath was starting to sting my eyebrows.

I wasn't sure what to do so, as inconspicuously as possible, I just stopped breathing entirely. This turned out to be a very temporary solution. A minute into it he began asking, "Hey, are you okay?" and "Why are you turning all red?" and "Why are your eyes rolling back like that?"

The next thing I knew, he was leaning over me and shaking me awake. There was no need for smelling salts so long as he was around.

"Wow, you just dropped like a ton of bricks," he was telling me, "You sure you're okay? So, like I was saying, when I was in the sixth grade I chose to do my book report on the Bible. Boy that sure was more than I bargained for..."

I just nodded my agreement. I wasn't hearing much of what he was saying at this point. All of my energies and all of my focus were spent trying to match my exhalations with his exhalations and his inhales with my inhales. Inhale. Exhale. Inhale; whoa he's starting to exhale! Switch, quick, switch; exhale. That's was a close one. I got a little bit of a whiff that time.

There I was. Stuck. I was stuck in a corner of a crowded room with a good hearted human being; a person with feelings; a person with hopes and dreams; a person whose heinous breath was birthing surprisingly violent thoughts within my head. It was all I could do to concentrate on timing my breathing and to NOT lash out.

There seemed to be no escape. I was stuck there for days and weeks. I could actually begin to see his breath as it snaked languidly out of his mouth in a mustard-yellowish sort of haze. Some of it would be drawn back into his mouth as he drew oxygen between words, but the majority wrapped itself around my skull, wove itself skillfully through my hair, and then floated upwards to remain hovering mere inches above our heads.

Suddenly a solution appeared. My friend Jeff had foolishly wandered close enough for me to pull him into my personal prison.

"Hey, Jeff; Tom wants to hear the story about when you ate a worm for five bucks," I said.

"Oh yeah?" Jeff responded. He is so proud of that story.

Over he sauntered, pausing with a visible shudder when he hit the Wall-O-Stench. His olfactory organs were attempting an emergency shut-down to battle this horrible affront. He was momentarily paralyzed. This was my chance.

"You're gonna love this story," I told stinky-breath. "I'm just going to go scrub the inside of my nostrils with Brillo pads and then I'm coming right back."

I headed right for the exit. I didn't look back and I didn't feel even a twinge of guilt.

Jeff wasn't doing well. From over my shoulder I could hear him.

"Want a mint?" he asked.

"No thanks," was Tom's reply.

"Please?"

Let's Hear it!! Your Two Cents...

Thumbs Up to the Wilmington Methodist Church for the church bells that play at noon and 6 p.m. (one of our favorite things about our neighborhood). But where have they been lately?

Wilmington

(editor's note: The bells will be back soon, according to the Wilmington United Methodist Church. The unscheduled hiatus has been due to a malfunction of the timer, but it is being replaced and should be up and running soon.)

They're going back to school!!!!

Wilmington

Last week's U25 letter gave us the "facts." Guess what, we know the facts. Our schools are in big trouble. What you should be doing is telling us how stripping the library of a measly $200,000 will solve all of our problems. Until you can do that, I vote "No" on all of your resolutions.

Tewksbury

Will Lowell Street every be driveable again (state project)? I notice that the town's sidewalk project on Church Street is going along quickly. Too bad the Wilmington DPW wasn't in charge of the Big Dig.

Wilmington

Can someone tell us why our schools are in the shape that they are in? Are all of the other towns having similar overcrowding issues? How and when did the budget problems begin, and why aren't we hearing about these things in other towns? Fiscal mismanagement?

Tewksbury

Simple minds seek simple solutions. Raiding the library budget will have serious results that the simple minds of U25 do not comprehend.

Our children and our entire community will suffer.

Work began on the new Kidsplace at the Shawsheen School in Wilmington last week and is expected to be completed by the end of this week. Fences separating the playground from the parking lot and from Shawsheen Avenue are scheduled to be built next week.

When Wilmington was Hoptown

The Rev. Roy Fiske of Lutz, Florida, in his historical address at St. Thomas Church, on September 25th 1980 referred to the era when Wilmington was known as Hoptown.

Hops, of course, is the material used for the making of beer. It is almost always referred to in the plural. Hops have been cultivated since antiquity, the Egyptians being among those who have been hop farmers. The early Colonials brought the plant with them from England.

The higher land in Wilmington was found to be a good place to grow hops. After the end of the Revolution the farming of the vine spread, and Wilmington hops acquired a reputation. This reputation was acquired, it may be noted, without the use of high-powered television commercials.

By 1805 hops were being grown commercially in Wilmington. The farming of hops became a town industry. It was an industry that spread out, to at least one or two farms in Tewksbury, in Burlington and in Andover.

Hops are vines, which have flowers, and which in turn produce (the writer believes) the portion that is picked and dried. Possibly it is the leaves which are picked, as in tea.

There are no hops growing in Wilmington today, with one possible exception. Where Middlesex Avenue and Route 62 part, in North Wilmington, is an old cut stonewall, dating back about 25 years or more. Hop vines have grown there every summer for years.

Possibly they still grow, against that wall. The writer has not examined that wall in recent years.

Undoubtedly, in part, the presence of the Middlesex Canal was responsible for the growth of the hop farming industry. The hops were grown in Wilmington principally, and in Tewksbury, Burlington and Andover, and were cured, generally over a fire, and then bagged and shipped to Charlestown. There they were loaded on vessels and sent to Albany, New York.

It would seem there was a brewery in that town that recognized the superior quality of the Wilmington hops. They were not, as far as is known, sent to any other destination.

From 1806 to 1837, 76,806 bags of hops were sent from Wilmington to Albany. The bags were large. Some of the smaller automobiles of today have less interior volume than there was in a bag of hops of that day.

The total value of the hops grown was $2,169,430. That sum, of course, is in the dollar of about 1812, when someone who was earning a dollar a day was being well paid.

The hop industry was so valuable in Massachusetts that careful records were kept, as to the number of bags shipped, and the quality of the hops in those bags. Keeping the records, once it had been decided to do that, was easy, as all (with one exception) were shipped via the canal, and all that was needed was to consult the manifests of the Middlesex canal barges, to find the total number shipped.

The one exception was during the War of 1812, when the Royal Navy of Britain had cruisers on the coast of New England, harrying commerce.

It was impossible to ship by water, from Boston to Albany.

Asa Sheldon, in his autobiography Wilmington Farmer, tells of that time. Asa, then a young man, transported hops overland, to its destination in New York. He did this with a large cart drawn by oxen. Quite probably other Wilmington men did the same thing, but there is no other record.

Asa relates of his fear of highwaymen, on his return trip. He tells how he hid the money he had received in the ear of one of the oxen. Fortunately, he seems to have met no bandits.

William Blanchard Jr., who may have lived in the home where John Brooks lived at the end of Middlesex Ave., where it meets Salem Street, was the State Inspector of Hops. It was an important job. His duty was to insure that all hops exported from Wilmington were up to the standards set by the state.

For this he was paid $2,000 a year.

That was the same salary as that given to the Governor of Massachusetts, and those two gentlemen were the only ones in the state to receive such a munificent salary.

William Blanchard, Jr. was better known as Squire Blanchard. He was an attorney. His father was the sergeant in the Wilmington Company of Minutemen, on Concord Day, and the Lieutenant, in Capt. John Harnden's company, at Bunker Hill. He was later a Colonel, commanding the Fourth Middlesex Regiment.

Many Wilmington families were farmers of hops, but it can be proven in only a few instances.

Behind the William Butters II house, on Chestnut Street, adjacent to the Baldwin Apple was a hop kiln. In the uplands near that house were (and are today) many stone walls.

Those stone walls mean that the fields were cleared, to grow hops.

They are a definite clue. Wherever, in Wilmington, one is going through the woods in upland, and one comes across a stone wall in those woods, that is a very good indication that someone was growing hops there, at about the time of the War of 1812.

Up in North Wilmington more stonewalls, may be found in the uplands. One can find them in the uplands between Andover and Ballardvale Streets, and between High Street and the new Route 62, over Route 93. There are also stonewalls in the land that was once a part of the Gowing Farm.

The Harnden family, and the Gowing family both undoubtedly were hop farmers. Dr. Silas Brown, who bought the Harnden Tavern, and raised his own crops, may have grown hops.

Indeed, the highest price paid for Wilmington hops was just after he had moved to Wilmington. In 1817 the price was 34 cents a pound. Two years later it had dropped to five cents.

Hop cultivation stopped in 1837. That was the second year (it seems) of the Hop Blight, a disease from which Wilmington hops never recovered.

Probably the best story, relative to hops, is that of the Benjamin Buck House, between Wildwood Street and Woburn Street. It is, at this time, the oldest house in town. It is also the only Hop House, in the United States, or so it is to be believed.

The Buck family had a lot of upland - where the Wildwood School is now located. They owned right down to the brook. Nathan Buck was the man who was the owner in the years after the Revolution. He was the son of Ephraim, he who had shot the last bear, back in August 1760.

As a guess Ephraim probably grew hops, for the family beer. So did Nathan. It was an old New England custom.

There were six children of the family of Nathan Buck and Elizabeth (Betty) Thompson. Benjamin and Jonathan are the two who are a part of the hops story. Or so it seems.

Benjamin is the man who is credited with making money, out of the growing of hops, in Wilmington. Benjamin lived in the old Buck house. He made a secret hiding place for his money, one which was discovered only 40 or so years ago. One of the old chestnut beams, on the first floor, had a little addition to it, that could not be detected by the casual glance, and in there, for half a century or so, Benjamin hid his money.

If the town needed $1,000 it would borrow the money from Benjamin.

This happened more than once, according to the town records.

When the church (Congregational) steeple blew down in 1876 it was Benjamin Buck who paid the $5,000 for a new steeple. He just went to his hiding place, after being certain that no one was watching, and got the money.

That was hop money.

The Buck House has a third floor, where the hops that were grown were dried, before they were sent to market. It seems to have been the only place where this was done.

Everywhere else the hops were dried in outdoor kilns.

After the hops were dried they were packed in big bags, and dropped down a chute, beside one of the chimneys, to the ground level. Then the bags were taken out and brought down to the canal, to be shipped to Charlestown.

As far as is known, the Benjamin Buck House is the only one in the United States which had, and still has, a hop chute. It seems to be unique.

Benjamin's older brother was Johnathan. He was two years older.

It would seem that the two brothers were partners, in the growing and selling of hops.

There is no written record of any such arrangement, of which this writer knows, but there is a better one, just next door.

Only a few feet from the Benjamin Buck House, on Wildwood and! Woburn Streets, is the Darius Buck House, now the home of Mrs. Shirley Callan. Darius Buck (born in 1826) was the son of Johnathan and Betsy.

It would seem that Benjamin and Johnathan lived together in the Buck House for years. It is a home arranged for two families, one on each side of the house.

When the hop money came pouring in, about 1817, then Johnathan thought it was time to have a home of his own. He had it built next door - a nice Federal home, almost a mansion.

There he lived, and there he and Betsy raised their children.

There is no record of their marriage, of which this writer knows. Betsy evidently was not a Wilmington girl.

But the first child, Henry, was born in 1821. That was four years after the highest price on hops, and probably four years after Johnathan Buck built that Callan home, on Woburn Street.

Benjamin, it turned out, gave his money to the church. Johnathan used his share to build a nice home for himself.

And it all came from Wilmington hops.

Boy with a Manatee mission

Brandon Fitzpatrick, age 9, is out to save the Manatees. Now in his second year of the project, Brandon has again held a "Save the Manatees" educational fundraising event in front of his Tewksbury home. The $143.00 raised in this year's event will go directly toward efforts to save the manatees from extinction. Brandon's older brother Brian handled the finances. Brandon is already making plans for next year.

The smartest card

The Smartest Card, Get it Use it @your library

September is National Library Cards Sign Up Month - a time when the American Library Association and libraries across the country remind parents that a library card is the most important school supply of all. With a library card, students can borrow the books they need to complete school assignments. If our library does not own the material needed, it can be borrowed on interlibrary loan from another library. Your library card can also be used in any of the 35 libraries in the Merrimack Valley Library Consortium.

When research assignments require using magazines and newspapers, a library card is also needed to access the magazine and newspaper databases. The often used "Google search" does not provide access to these subscription databases. Use your library card to sharpen your test taking skills with Learning Express, a new service that offers a variety of educational practice tests for students of all ages. To get a library card at the Wilmington Memorial Library, just stop by with identification that shows your Wilmington address. Make sure everyone in your family has a library card!

Teen Zone Ready for September

Brandy Danner Teen Services Librarian wants teens to know that the Teen Zone is ready for new school year to start! Whether you need some help finding material for an assignment or just looking for a place to do your homework, the library is a place that welcomes you. The library has Microsoft Office on all its Internet computers. So if your computer or printer crashes, we can save the day. Since teens also need time to just relax, there are some fun events planned starting in mid-September. Watch for monthly craft programs, role-playing games, book discussions, and movie nights. Take some time to stop by and check out our newly-expanded teen collection! In August alone, we've added more than 60 titles—non-fiction, mysteries, sci-fi, comics, and more—with plenty more on the way.

Teen Book Discussion

Online homework help

As students gear up to begin the start of a new school year, the Tewksbury Public Library is building up its online resources to assist students with their homework. A new database called Literary Reference Center has been added to the library's e-collections, and is a great resource for high school and college students working on literature assignments. The database is available in the Library, or it can be accessed from your home or school computer if you have a Tewksbury library card.

Need a criticism on a story or poem by Edgar Allan Poe? Browse through the listing of works for The Fall of the House of Usher. In a main overview of the work, you will see a link to criticism. The database contains almost 30 full text literary criticism and work analysis articles on that one title.

Looking for critical information on a non-fiction work? Sometimes this kind of information is available in a book review. In the advanced search screen you can limit your search to reviews. A search for book reviews on the true story The Devil in the White City turns up 12 full text book reviews.

Need biographical information on a poet or author? Browse through the listing of authors for the poet Elizabeth Bishop. In the main entry on this poet, click on the link for biographies. There are six full text biographies on Bishop; some with a picture of the poet included.

Want to hear what Anne Rice has to say about writing a particular work, or on the craft of writing in general? You can find interviews with the author in this database as well.

In Literary Reference Center you can also find the full text of over 1,000 reference books and monographs, coverage of over 300 literary magazines and journals, the full text for 25,000 poems and over 11,000 short stories. Many of the entries are available in PDF format.

Other features of the database include a fascinating literary historical timeline, Merriam Webster's Encyclopedia of Literature, the outstanding American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language, and a literary glossary.

From ancient to contemporary writers this database contains information on thousands of authors and their works across all literary disciplines. To access this database remotely from your home or school computer simply visit the Tewksbury Public Library's web site (www.tewksburypl.org), and click on the link for the database of the month.

The public library's web page, www.tewksburypl.org, is updated on a regular basis and contains a wealth of information. Check out the site for holiday closing schedules, changes in hours of operation, news of upcoming events and other services.

Summer Reading Club wrap-up

Our Summer Reading Club, "What's buzzin' at your library," was wildly successful this year. We had nearly 1100 kids in preschool through sixth grade signed up for the reading club this year, which is almost a 30 percent increase from last summer!

Our members checked in regularly throughout the summer to show us how much they'd read. Children in preschool through third grade got small incentive prizes for reading certain numbers of books. Kids who read 50 or more books got to write their names on insect shapes that we hung up around the room. Children in grades four through six received raffle tickets for every book read and we pulled winners every Friday throughout the summer to win a special prize package. All our participants got to put insect stickers on our giant spider web every time they checked in. Our giant spider moved down the room towards the web every week, counting up the total number of books read until he finally reached the web on our party day after counting up over 16,000 books!

We broke records this summer for attendance at our fun summer programs, too. Kids enjoyed such events like the Chill Out Party where we made ice cream (or tried to anyway!) and decorated t-shirts or Curious Creatures where we got to touch live animals like scorpions, tarantulas, lizards, alligators and snakes! We listened to great stories from Davis Bates, got to act with City Stage Theater, picnicked with the teddy bears, danced and sang with Miss Beverly, learned how to juggle and knit, and made many cool crafts. Thank you to the Friends of the Library and to the Tewksbury Cultural Council for sponsoring many of these great events.

Our Summer Reading Club party was our best yet. This year we celebrated on Friday, August 11 with a carnival theme on a beautiful sunny day. Summer Reading Club members picked up their certificates and got to ride the castle moonbounce, get their faces painted, eat a sno-cone, play games, and younger children went through our sea monster obstacle course. It was our biggest party ever, with 300 attendees celebrating with us. Special thanks go to our face painting volunteer Jessica and our volunteer Steve who ran the games. Everyone who attended told us they had a wonderful time.

We'd like to thank this year's sponsors of the What's buzzin' at your library: C.V.S. Pharmacies, Burger King, Market Basket, Cracker Barrel, Papa Gino's, the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners, the Massachusetts Regional Library Systems, and the Friends of the Library.

We'd also like to thank all of the many parents, grandparents, and other caregivers who brought their children in to the library to participate in the Summer Reading Club and our many other programs we had this summer. Encouraging a child to read is one of the best and most important gifts anyone can give.

If you missed the Summer Reading Club Party, we still have your certificate for you here in the Children's Room. Come by any time through September 9 to pick it up. Don't forget to keep your reading logs and turn them in to your new teacher when you start school this fall.

Lost your summer reading logs from school? Or need more of those book report forms? You can print them off of the Tewksbury Public Schools website at www.tewksbury.mec.edu. Just click on the Summer Reading link.

Still need to get your summer reading done? We have displays of appropriate books for grades 3 through 6 in the Children's Room. You can also check out our Book Lists at www.tewksburypl.org/childrens/booklists.htm or our Rave Reviews Log at www.ravereviewslog.blogspot.com. Or ask at the Children's desk for some suggestions.

TWILIGHT-TO-DARK CANOE TRIP: Thursday, September 7, 6:00 - 9:00 p.m.

Discover the magic of an autumn evening on the Ipswich River with sanctuary director Carol Decker. We'll watch for ducks and herons flying into the marsh for the night, keep our eyes open for muskrats, beavers, and mink, and listen for owls, frogs, and other creatures of the night. We'll stop on Perkins Island to stretch our legs and enjoy some campfire snacks. Participants should have basic canoeing skills and be able to swim. All equipment will be provided. Advance registration is required. FEE: $30 (discount for Mass Audubon members). For more information or to register, call 978-887-9264.

TAKE A WALK ON THE WILD SIDE: Tuesday, September 12, 9:00-10:30 a.m.

Do you want to learn how to invite birds, butterflies, and helpful insects into your garden? Take a guided walk through the Ipswich River Wildlife Sanctuary's backyard bird habitat garden with landscape designer and sanctuary volunteer, Catherine Carney-Feldman. See firsthand what native plants, shrubs, trees, and herbs have been planted to attract a plethora of buzzing, flying, and humming activity. Handouts will be available on the plantings so that you may experiment with and plant a nature garden of your own. (Rain date: September 24) Learn to identify birds in their fall plumage and observe the variety of ways birds prepare for winter. Why do some birds migrate while others overwinter? How does their behavior change as winter approaches? We'll discuss these questions and more as we explore the ponds, marshes, fields, forests and river edges of the Ipswich River Wildlife Sanctuary in search of the wide variety of bird species attracted to these habitats. Bring binoculars and a field guide. Advance registration is required. FEE: $12 (discount for Mass Audubon members). For more information or to register call 978-887-9264.

KAYAK TO CHOATE ISLAND: Saturday, September 23, 10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.

The five islands and surrounding salt marsh in the Essex River estuary are a kayaker's and naturalist's delight. The forested islands provide resting and feeding lookouts for migrating raptors, and the rich mudflats attract a variety of shorebirds. Join Ipswich River Wildlife Sanctuary Director, Carol Decker, and kayaking guides from Essex River Basin Adventures for this trip. We will pull out and walk Choate Island, also known as Hog Island, to observe fall butterflies and migrating monarchs; view the historic houses, and enjoy the view from the top of the drumlin. Participants should have some kayaking experience. Limited to 12. All equipment will be provided. Advance registration is required. FEE: $85 (discount for Mass Audubon members). Atmospheric optics describes the interplay between sunlight and the sky. In addition to finding out what causes rainbows, you will learn about halos, sun dogs, and other wondrous atmospheric displays that occur when sunlight interacts with certain sky conditions. Afterwards (weather permitting) view the evening sky through the telescopes of the North Shore Amateur Astronomy Club. Children 10 years and older are welcome if accompanied by an adult. er had gunlocks in place and had stored the weapons properly.

"The homeowner did absolutely nothing wrong," Miller said. "(Forster) had information that the weapons and jewelry were there."

Following leads and unearthing a tip from an informant, Wilmington detectives tracked Forster to a home on Truman Avenue in Billerica. Billerica Police converged on the scene and apprehended Forster, who had a significant amount of the stolen jewelry in his possession at the time of his arrest.

Forster had been known to police for sometime from his involvement in drug activity, assaults, and prior house-breaks.

"He's done it all," Miller said.

All of the missing weapons were recovered, but thousands of dollars worth of the jewelry was long gone by the time police apprehended Forster. One piece, still missing, is a custom-made ring in the shape of snake with eight diamonds and two rubies for eyes.

"It is a very distinctive ring and it's worth thousands," Miller said.

It took the jury only three hours to return with a verdict of guilty on all 19 indictments.

"It took four years to go to trial, but this is a good win for us," Miller said.

site in July. The Conservation Commission did approve the Order of Conditions, with 16 additions, on Tuesday night.

24-month construction schedule.

With both of these town boards approving permits, Lincoln Properties is able to continue on its fast track goal of getting the site permitted, built and leased to its first tenants by March 2008. The apartment complex is named "The Residences at Martins Brook."

The proponents are simultaneously juggling state and town permitting authorities in the race to get building permits issued in the next month or so. This will enable the old state hospital buildings to be razed this fall and other preliminary site work to be completed to ensure shovels will be in the ground in the spring of 2007.

Once construction commences, Lincoln Properties is intent on delivering a completed project in 24 months. Although they admit it's an ambitious schedule to construct 11 buildings plus a clubhouse, inground pool, and all related infrastructure - including a wastewater treatment facility - they've met every goal so far, according to the company's Vice President, John Noone.

Chap. 40B permit converted. Last November, when Lincoln Properties submitted a Chap. 40B proposal for 360 apartments and 48 townhouses on about 48-acres of the defunct 87-acre state hospital site, the ZBA appointed the J.T. Berry Center subcommittee to negotiate with the developers.

Under Chap. 40B applications, local zoning and subdivision control regulations are overridden by right if 10 percent of a community's housing stock is not considered "affordable." North Reading's was less than two percent at that time.

Last fall, the state Legislature approved the Chap. 40R Smart Growth statute, which includes monetary incentives to communities willing to create an overlay zoning district to incorporate "smart growth" principles into a development. Since no such incentive payments are available under Chap. 40B, the town was eager to work with Lincoln to convert the project to a 40R application, and succeeded. Lincoln kept its original 40B plan on the back burner just in case efforts by the town to adopt the Smart Growth overlay district failed. On Tuesday afternoon, the ZBA followed the same strategy by voting to continue the hearing on a 40B permit, an action which will keep the application alive in case it is needed as a contingency.

The applicant altered its plans by eliminating the 48 for-sale townhouse units and increasing the number of rental units by 46, for a total of 406. This was done for several reasons.

Eliminating the townhouses pulled the development farther away from sensitive wetlands areas. Also, under both 40B and 40R, all apartment units are counted toward a town's "affordable housing" quota even though only 25 percent of these apartments will be rented at below-market rates. By increasing the number of apartments, the town will reach its 10 percent quota at least through 2011 (when data from the 2010 national census become known).

Additionally, one- and twoize over $1.5 million in payments from the state to offset the impact of a large, dense development on the community, including its infrastructure, traffic, public safety and schools.

North Reading State Rep.

span of about eight months, the Berry Center Smart Growth overlay district was drafted by the town, accepted by the state, and successfully passed by voters at a special town meeting in May. In July, DHCD issued an approval letter to the town for the impact of dense development districts created under the Smart Growth program.

Class A offices, restaurant planned for rest of land

The remaining 36-acres of the former Berry Center state property will be developed by the Gutierrez Co. of Burlington. Gutierrez is currently seeking a major tenant or tenants for the site and will "build to suit" 600,000 square feet of "Class A" office space. A smaller, separate parcel also remains available, potentially for a restaurant.

The apartment complex, as well as the office space and the restaurant, will all be served by the same access driveway off Lowell Road.

As part of the development proposed by Lincoln Properties, Lowell Road will be widened in this area to accommodate turning lanes into the development from both directions. The infrastructure will also be built to accommodate future traffic signals at the site entrance.

The existing secondary access road near Mullin Field and across the street from North St. will be closed off to through traffic. The Town of North Reading is also working with the state to secure the rights to a small parcel of state-owned land wedged between the North St./Lowell Rd. intersection and Benevento's to widen it and improve traffic circulation in this area.

Originally, the Gutierrez Co. proposed to build about one million square feet of Class A office space on this site, which the town rezoned from residential to industrial/office after the state closed the J.T. Berry Center in 1993. Gutierrez had won the bidding process initiated by the state to return the property back to the tax rolls with that proposal.

About two years ago, after the market for office space in the Greater Boston area plummeted, Gutierrez changed gears and brought in Lincoln Properties, a nationwide real estate development company, to tap into the residential housing growth of the area.

Locally, Lincoln Properties built and continues to operate The Ridge in Waltham. Its apartment proposal for the Berry site mirrors The Ridge, and Lincoln intends to operate it after it is built.

Gutierrez retains the rights from the state to develop the commercial side of the property through 2012.

The 406-unit apartment development proposed for the J.T. Berry site has the greenlight from North Reading's Zoning Board of Appeals and Conservation Commission. The structure will be situated entirely in North Reading, but the site straddles North Reading and Wilmington.

bedroom apartments generally attract fewer families with school-aged children than townhouses, reducing the impact on the town's schools. Sixty percent of the apartments will be one-bedroom while 40 percent will be two-bedroom.

If Lincoln's project goes forward, North Reading will real-

its Zoning Incentive Payment of $350,000 from the Smart Growth Housing Trust Fund.

Subsequent payments of $3,000 per unit will be made to the town as occupancy permits are granted. These funds are made available through the trust fund created by the Ch. 40 legislation to help town's offset

Over 35 Men's Hockey

Tewksbury scores nine goals against Wilmington

By DAN IGO
Sports Correspondent

Former hockey standouts, years past their graduation date, got to relive their high school glory days Saturday afternoon at Superskills Rink in Tewksbury.

Players from Wilmington and Tewksbury took part in a 12-team tournament called the "Merrimack Valley Cup." All proceeds made during the tournament will go to charity.

Age divisions ranged from Mite to Men's over 35. Saturday afternoon was the over-35 tournament, and at 1:45, Wilmington faced off against Tewksbury. The tournament required players to live in the town that they are playing for or to have played high school hockey for that town. The game was one dominated on the offensive end, and Tewksbury pulled out a 9-4 victory.

Tewksbury's team featured two players that have been head coaches for the Redmen Varsity team. Bob Ware did not play in Saturday's game, but Derek Doherty, the current head coach, did participate.

"It was good," said Doherty. "It was a lot of fun but it was also very competitive. It was great to see all of the towns get so many alumni together. And the money goes to charity so that's a great thing."

The first period, which was only 12 minutes, was scoreless until the six-minute mark. Wilmington got on the board first when Bob Ricci found the back of the net. Tewksbury's Paul Crowley answered at the 3:11 mark with a goal of his own to tie the game up. His teammate, Tim Quinn, helped Tewksbury grab its first lead of the game when he scored 30 seconds later. Wilmington's Sil Ferrara tied the game up with 2:20 left in the period, and the score remained that way at the end of the first.

Despite the fact that Wilmington out-manned Tewksbury 14-9, the Redmen dominated the rest of the game. Doherty scored his first goal of the game, which was of the shorthanded variety, to give Tewksbury a 3-2 lead. The goal was a beauty, with Doherty alone on the breakaway and completely baffling the Wilmington netminder.

Tewksbury's Tony Sylvestri scored his first goal of the game and made the score 4-2 halfway through the second. Crowley notched his second goal of the game with 3:08 left to extend the Redmen lead to three. Andy May scored one for Wilmington 40 seconds later to cut the lead to two heading into the third period.

The third period was basically the Derek Doherty show. He scored three goals in the period, and Tewksbury padded its lead. His first goal of the period, and second of the game, came at the 7:42 mark to give Tewksbury a 6-3 lead. Ferrara answered with his second goal to put Wilmington within striking distance at 6-4. However, Doherty completed the hat trick with 3:33 left to extend the Tewksbury lead to 7-3. He scored another one with 32 seconds left for his fourth of the game. Sylvestri scored his second of the game five seconds later, and Tewksbury took the game 9-4.

Both teams played for worthy charities. Tewksbury's charity was the Tewksbury Hockey Alumni Association, while Wilmington played for its town's D.A.R.E. program. Alas, neither Tewksbury nor Wilmington ended up winning the over-35 division title. That honor went to Greater Haverhill.

Tewksbury was able to get on the podium with a third place finish. The overall winner of the Merrimack Valley Cup was Reading.

Tewksbury High senior to be John Cahalane, just finished up playing in the Hockey Night in Boston Summer Showcase. Cahalane, shown here during this past season, will be one of the two captains for this year's 2006-07 TMHS Redmen Hockey team. (file photo)

Hockey Night in Boston Summer Showcase

Cahalane brings home hardware

By DAN IGO
Sports Correspondent

Tewksbury's John Cahalane will remember this summer differently than many of his friends. While his friends will remember heat, all he'll remember is ice.

Cahalane will be the captain of the Redmen hockey team this winter. He will be the starting center on the team's first line. Knowing the responsibility he will have as not only the captain but also as the team's leading returning scorer, he competed this summer in the 32nd annual Hockey Night in Boston Summer Showcase.

Cahalane first competed in the tryout showcase in Chelmsford. He made the all-star team there. Now this isn't an average local hockey team. Kids from all over New England competed in this tournament, so to make the all-star squad is quite an accomplishment.

The summer showcase was next for Cahalane, and he excelled in that as well. This time, he played against kids from around the country and Canada. Not just anyone could suit up and play for a team. There was a selection process, and 400 of the best hockey prospects in North America were chosen to compete in the showcase. He played for the Middlesex team and was one of the few public school players participating. Many of his teammates and opponents played for prep schools. Sixty NHL players are former participants in the summer showcase, including nine who were drafted last June.

The summer showcase ended last Tuesday night after an all-star game in Salem, NH. Once again, Cahalane was a participant in the game. He also took some hardware home, as he won the league's "Biggest Surprise Award." Cahalane said he thought he won this award because he was the only public school player who was among the league's top scorers. He ended the showcase with 21 points.

Cahalane's summer has been hockey, hockey and more hockey. He estimates he played two hours a day almost every day of the summer. He says he's looking forward to leading the Redmen into battle come winter, but his team isn't perfect.

"We're going to have a pretty good team," he said. "We have some decent forwards and a good goalie (Bill Stuart, who also played in the summer showcase). We're going to be young on defense though. We had five senior defensemen last year, so we're going to need a lot more scoring this year."

There is going to be added pressure on Cahalane this year, considering how successful he was last year and the fact that he is a captain this year. However, he says that he felt the pressure last year due to the fact that he was the leading scorer on the team as well.

"I'm glad John is playing (in the showcase)," said TMHS hockey coach Derek Doherty. "It's a good thing and he faces some really good competition. John's a strong kid. He's developing into a good hockey player. He has size, he can put the puck in the net and we're looking for big things from him this (upcoming) season."

This will be Cahalane's senior year, but he most likely won't be attending college next year. Like many prominent hockey prospects, he says he is going to take a different route.

"Before college I need a year of prep school," he said. "Then I'm going to need at least a year of two in juniors. I will play in Canada, the Midwest, or stay local around here."

Reading YMCA Golf Tour

The excitement is building at the Burbank YMCA for the 9th
Annual Benefit Golf Tournament.
Mark your calendars for Friday,
September 15th at the Thomson
Country Club in North Reading.
Thomson Country Club is a private course.

The Golf Tournament is held yearly to raise money for the YMCA ACCESS Program. The ACCESS program is a financial assistance program used to help those individuals and families less fortunate. ACCESS has provided numerous families with afterschool childcare, summer camp, fitness and aquatic programs for adults and children and memberships so families can come together and enjoy family fun. The Burbank YMCA gave out over $131,000 in 2005.

The Benefit Golf Tournament is a 7:30 am Shotgun start with day of registration starting at 6:45 am. It is an 18 hole event, scramble format. There will be prizes awarded to the top three finishing teams. There will be prizes and raffles including a Brand New 2007 automobile for the hole-in-one prize, male and female closest to the pin and male and female longest drive to name a few. Each participant will receive a sleeve of golf balls and tees, limited to the first 72 golfers.

Golfers may sign up as individuals or in a foursome.
Registration includes 18 holes of golf, lunch at Thomson Country Club, use of a golf cart and complimentary gifts.

There are different ways to contribute to the YMCA Golf Tournament.

The first and most enjoyable would be to play. Enjoy 18 holes with people like you, interested, involved and ready to play.

Another way would be to become a sponsor. The Burbank YMCA is looking for businesses or individuals to sponsor this benefit tournament. The YMCA is a non-profit organization.
Donations are also welcome.

The cost for a day of golf, lunch and raffle prizes is $150 per player or $600 for a foursome. For interested parties or if you would like to receive more information about the YMCA's 9th Annual Benefit Golf Tournament, please contact Dave Witkus at 781-944-9622 x224 or Laurie Spagnuolo at

Bent, but not broken

in Air Conditioning for the entire week and they blew it! Fortunately a trip to the electrical panel resolved the problem but a few laughs at their own expense made another entertaining dinnertime story.

As mentioned earlier, the flooding of the Church had made a mess of the interior and exterior paint of the Church. Several of the group spent an afternoon painting the doors and molding. It looked much better after its new coat. I'm sure our brother Christians appreciated the fresh look on Sunday morning.

For most of the week, work revolved around the two primary homes we were working on. On Tuesday at Ladner's house the crew arrived to find that a new shower enclosure had been installed against the old bathroom window. From the inside it didn't look too bad. From the outside the insulation was pressed up against the back window! Dennis Hanson cut a piece of wood to cover the window and then painted it to look like a closed pair of shutters that match shutters on the rest of the house. Some of the doors were customized to comply with the handicapped accessibility. Closet doors were hung, sheetrock, green board, taping, mudding and painting took up much of the rest of the week. A ton of finish work was accomplished.

Tuesday night many of us sat around and watched a VCR tape of "ABC's Extreme Home Makeover" program that was filmed in February of this year. The efforts of "Home Makeover" are reflected in the Memorial to Katrina Victims about a mile from where we were staying, and the rebuilding of a nearby Family Health Care Clinic that caters to those who do not have health insurance. The messages were powerful. We were able to visit both locations later in the week.

Wednesday evening after dinner we went on a road trip to find St. Thomas' Catholic Church in Long Beach, just west of Gulfport. Like the rest of the coast, destruction is everywhere. St. Thomas' Church is no exception. Miraculously, although all of the walls are blown out, several stained glass windows remain intact, suspended from their supports. Perhaps a subtle message that God is waiting for His house to be rebuilt.

Despite our own efforts we could not have accomplished half of the work without the direction and guidance of the volunteers at the Methodist Church. Many spiritually gifted people have come to Biloxi to help out and some have stayed behind to continue with their work. Randy from Northern Mississippi was a landscape contractor before he went south for the recovery efforts. In addition to supervising the younger volunteers in "landscaping" (a.k.a. trash clean-up), weeding, and maintenance work, he is also one of the caretakers of the church. He's usually one of the last to go to bed at night and one of the first awake in the morning.

Jim from Iowa came down in March with a group from his church community. He has stayed on to help run the jobs that the Church is sponsoring. A very quiet and shy man, he had the unique ability to get us everything we needed at the job sites within a short period of time. Many members of the group developed a close friendship with Jim who truly exemplifies God's will and spirit. Our only concern was that some of our Massachusetts Catholicism might have intimidated him. By the end of the week it was apparent that Jim really enjoyed his time with us and when we took him to dinner Friday night tears of laughter were running down his face much of the evening.

Although we all worked very hard it cannot be said that we did not have our share of laughs and fun memories. Thursday afternoon at 4:00 p.m. we "quit early" in order to take a shrimp boat ride along the Gulf of Mexico. The mini shrimp boat was the only boat docked in the marina because the rest of the marina was in ruins. Corey (The Captain) and Virginia (The pilot) took us about 200 yards out and "dragged the bottom" with a miniaturized version of a shrimp

net. As we chugged along just offshore we could see the absolute destruction still affecting the beachfront hotels and casinos. The casino barge that sat adjacent to the Hard Rock Hotel complex now sits at a 45-degree angle leaning against the third and fourth floors of the destroyed hotel.

Destruction is evident everywhere. It will be years before they fully recover.

As Corey pulled in the shrimp net he displayed to us a vast array of sea life including several dozen shrimp, crabs, cat fish, a squid, and more than a hundred more small fish all of which he identified for us. It was an entertaining and interesting experience near the end of a hot hard week.

Even on Saturday morning as some of us were boarding a flight home, Dave Travis and Mike Worthington made a final house call to repair some vinyl siding that had blown off a house several miles away.

Ray and Mary Marshall are originally from Texas and have spearheaded the Hurricane Relief Efforts at the United Methodist Church. I guess we can thank God for people like Ray who take the time to take charge and make sure there is some level of coordination. When we first arrived, Ray told us a story about a little boy who saw thousands of starfish washed up on the beach. As the boy started to throw some of them back into the ocean, a man asked him why he was bothering to throw them back because there were so many stranded on the beach. The little boy replied that at least the ones he threw back into the water would have the chance to live.

By the end of our week, we were extremely proud to know that the work that we completed far exceeded everything that Ray and his group had hoped for. We went a long way toward saving those starfish on the beach. Everyone was in agreement that the trip was extremely rewarding and productive and Fr. Earley pledged that we would be going back.

We would be remiss if we did not thank everyone in the parish who helped contribute to the support of this years STAMP program. Whether you bought a box of donuts, attended the STAMP dance or just made a monetary contribution, we simply could not have done it without you. In addition to paying our travel and food expenses, we raised enough money to leave an additional $3,000 for continued relief efforts. We also have enough money left to start planning for our next trip.

Special thanks also go out to Mr. David McCue and Mrs. Peg Doane who made substantial donations of tools, and to FEDEX in Wilmington who shipped 24 boxes of tools and supplies without cost to STAMP, to aid in the recovery process.

We cannot end this chapter without mentioning that the needs are still great. There are still 130,000 people living in FEMA trailers along the Gulf of Mexico from New Orleans to Mobile, Alabama. There is a critical need for skilled tradesmen. Whether you are a contractor, electrician, plumber, rug installer or painter your skills could make the difference in allowing someone to move back into their home. Over 200 people died in Biloxi during Katrina and without the sacrifice and generosity of other Americans like you, many more will die before they can move back into their own homes.

Several Churches in Wilmington have already sponsored trips to the Gulf Coast and more will be scheduled. We'd like to ask you to consider the opportunity to make a profound difference in rebuilding someone's life. We'd ask others to continue with their generosity. In a recent Email from Ray Marshall he mentioned that although most volunteers have a big heart they tend to be weak in "construction skills". He went on to say that our efforts made a lasting impact on their church, their community, and to the homeowners who benefited. What better inspiration could possibly be used to convince us to return again to the Gulf Coast to do God's work?

Inquiries, information or monetary donations can be made to STAMP, c/o Fr. Philip Earley, 126 Middlesex Av. Wilmington 01887.

Connecting towns

and could not carry the weight of large trucks.

Many of the bridges along the line were built by Asa Sheldon, a farmer, contractor and state representative who lived in Wilmington. In his autobiography, he listed 14 bridges on that railroad which he had rebuilt. The names he used are old. He listed one as the Saw-pit Woods bridge, which was the Eames Street bridge. And there was the Boutelle bridge, so called, which would have been in Woburn, and possibly was the New Boston Street bridge.

Sheldon also built many miles of rail line. In his book, he specifically mentions the section that ran through the Eldad Carter farm in Wilmington. That farm was on Shawsheen Avenue, at Bridge Lane.

The ownership of the bridges was long a point of contention. The town roads ran up to each side of the railroad right-of-way, but the railroad owned the bridges. Then in the 1950s, the railroad fell into financial distress. The Boston & Maine Railroad approached the towns, seeking to have them take over the bridges. Eventually, the responsibility was taken over by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

All the old railroad bridges in Wilmington have been replaced, although one, the Butters Row bridge, remains a one-lane bridge with a wooden deck. Another, the Shawsheen Avenue bridge, is open only to foot traffic. New bridges are in place at Eames Street, Burlington Avenue, Route 129, Lake Street and Nichols Street.

The New Boston Street bridge was in North Woburn, about a hundred yards south of the Tabby Cat Food plant. Crossing it was not recommended for the faint of heart. If you met a vehicle coming the other way, one or the other had to back down the hill and around a curve.

Such a situation still exists at the Butters Row bridge today, but not as bad as existed at the New Boston Street bridge.

On occasion, the bridge would be closed for replacement of the wooden deck. For years, the state studied it. State Rep. Fred Cain was working on a proposal to replace it in the early 1970s. Then in 1977, it was closed for good. Fred Cain died in May 1977.

After the bridge closed, it became a political football. Residents of the Woburn Street area in south or east Wilmington did not want the bridge reopened.

They felt that it would allow people working in North Woburn a short-cut to Route 93 via Route 129. Of course, other people wanted it opened, so they could use it as a quicker way to access Route 128.

Rep. Jim Miceli promised his constituents that it would not reopen until there were alternative routes.

Well, that has happened. There is a link to North Woburn via Commerce Way, and an exit from Route 93. So now there are plans in the works to rebuild the New Boston Street bridge.

Although the bridge is located entirely in Woburn, crossing over the Boston-Lowell railroad tracks, it connects the two municipalities and therefore the project required Wilmington's blessing in order to be eligible for state funding.

Wilmington Selectmen voted 4 to 1 in June of 2004 to support the re-opening of the bridge.

State funds have been appropriated for the project, Woburn officials learned earlier this month. The study/design of the reconstruction project is estimated to cost approximately $400,000. The construction is expected to cost in excess of $5 million.

Frank Webb puts his touch on the Emmys

By PAUL FEELY

It's a long way from Burlington, Massachusetts to the behind-the-scenes world of Hollywood, but there's precisely where the latest work of an architectural designer with local roots will be on display next week.

Frank Webb, a Burlington native now affiliated with White Webb, LLC, is one of two designers chosen to create the signature Architectural Digest Greenroom at the 58th Annual Primetime Emmy Awards, which is scheduled to air live on NBC on August 27th 8:00-11:00 pm (ET/PT).

Architectural Digest, currently celebrating its fifth year creating the exclusive backstage lounge, is widely credited for having "invented" the high-design greenroom concept. In designing this year's room, White Webb has drawn inspiration from the exotic style of the Shrine Auditorium, site of the Emmy Awards.

The Primetime Emmys® have celebrated the work of the most luminous talents in television for more than half a century. During this year's telecast to millions around the world, many of these glitterati will assemble in the Architectural Digest Greenroom—a custom-designed backstage retreat where celebrity presenters relax during the broadcast from the Shrine Auditorium.

According to a release, the site is a landmark theater in Los Angeles, the Moorish-style edifice boasts towering domes, elegant arches and fretwork that are reminiscent of a distant time and place. Taking their cues from the theater's fantastical architecture and its Tinseltown setting, White Webb will envelop the stars with their unique vision of a "Hollywood Casbah."

"We were intrigued by Matthew White, a classicist, and Frank Webb, a modernist, because of the way they blend their styles to create something entirely fresh and unexpected," explained Churgin. "Constructed for one big night only, the Architectural Digest Greenroom will magically appear like a mirage from the bare bones of the Shrine's backstage. Opulent, mysterious and transporting, this beautiful space could be the dream of a genie."

"With my designs, I like to draw on varied cultural and historic traditions, but I always introduce an interesting twist to make them fresh and new," said Webb. "Balancing bold statements with subtle elegance is an art I learned while growing up in Massachusetts, where there's a great climate of cultural diversity, intellectual curiosity and Yankee restraint. For the Architectural Digest Emmy Greenroom, we've created a similar mix of amazing contrasts. The end result is utterly unexpected and delightful."

From his earliest days, Webb can remember being somewhat of a design junkie, but it took him a long time to cede control to his admitted addiction. While he admired and studied the work of architects and designers for many years, he devoted the first phase of his professional life to the financial services industry. During the seventeen years he spent in this field, he honed his skills in project management, strategic planning, and communications, culminating in his running Client Service as a managing director for J.P. Morgan Fleming Asset Management.

Seeking a new challenge, he left the firm in 2002 and began to explore new fields. Eager to capitalize on his skills in building businesses and his passion for creative expression, he was fortunate to meet Matthew White, a kindred soul with similar ideas. Excited by the prospect of advancing a mutually-held design aesthetic, he decided to join forces with Matthew White and formed White Webb in early 2004. With his extensive experience in project management, product development, and client service, he places enormous emphasis on quality control and maximizing the client experience.

Frank holds a degree in international economics from Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service, as well as a certificate in international business from Nijenrode, the Netherlands School of Business. Like his counterpart, he too is involved with a number of non-profit organizations, having lent volunteer assistance to The Art Party, The Asian University for Women Support Foundation, and the Community Development Venture Capital Alliance.

As far as this year's green room goes, by playing with the proportions of dramatic Moroccan patterns and incorporating rich materials and sumptuous color, Webb will present a stunning jewel box for Hollywood's glitterati.

At the center of the Architectural Digest Greenroom: a tête-à-tête covered in Bergamo coral velvet, from which the rest of the room will unfold in colors ranging from luscious melon to cool, calming pewter. Other furnishings will include a Gatsby sofa and Sparta end table by Kreiss, LC-TVs by Sharp AQUOS, flooring by BR-111, lighting by Vaughan, and fabrics by Bergamo Fabric, Inc. and Donghia, Inc.

The greenroom's crystal accents will be provided by Swarovski, who will debut its new crystal pocket binoculars in clear, gold and black crystals, available to the public this fall. Off of the main room will sit an alcove awash in faint colors that evoke the inside of a seashell and featuring an area rug by Mansour. Set apart by

"SNAKES ON A PLANE" - THRILLING

"SNAKES ON A PLANE"

GRADE: ***

There's no denying that "Snakes on a Plane" is probably the most hyped movie of the summer. There are few movies out there that can claim to have their signature line spouted from fandom not days, not weeks, but months before the movie even hits theaters. For that matter, there are even fewer that can claim it wasn't the movie's writers, but a fan who came up with the line in the first place. Who can claim that? Snakes on a Plane.

In case the title doesn't give it away, "Snakes on a Plane" features a storyline of killer snakes attacking an FBI agent and a witness in his protection on a plane. The snakes are so riled up that nobody is going to stop them from attacking, not the plane's captain, not the uppity British snob character, or the protective mother with her newborn children, or the two young kids traveling alone, or even the parodies of Kanye West and Paris Hilton type characters. These snakes are deadly, and if killing the humans through a variety of nasty ways isn't enough, just slithering around in the walls of the plane, randomly attacking things, can do enough damage to bring the plane down. Armed with a variety of weapons from tasers to broken beer bottles, the passengers must do their best to survive until the plane can land safely on its voyage from Hawaii to Los Angeles.

There is only one man who could possibly confront such an odd disaster: Samuel L. Jackson. Somehow, Jackson's presence removes the ridiculousness of the situation. Maybe it's because he delivers his lines with such serious devotion to making this situation real. We want to watch Jackson trash some snake behind, which he does, from the moment he first encounters the slithering reptiles until the very end. You can't help but cheer as Jackson dispatches the snakes with various weapons, leading up to his signature line which has a good chance of having the audience yell out with him. After all, they're the ones who inspired it.

What makes the movie work is that Snakes on a Plane is fully aware of how silly its situation is, but it doesn't try to take a tongue-in-cheek approach. It makes no apologies, but doesn't make fun of itself either. The movie is played straight, completely formulaic as an action flick without actually making fun of the action genre. It's simple. Here's the problem: There are snakes on the plane. Now how do we deal with that? In fact, the few times the movie seems absurd is when it tries to over-explain itself, such as suggesting the snakes being cold-blooded is why the FBI missed them being on the plane during its scans or explaining off the aggressive behavior of the animals due to pheromones. We don't care about how this happened. The fact that anyone thought of this, let alone filmed it, is absurd enough. Let us enjoy that absurdity as we watch Jackson face off with the snakes.

Does this movie make you think? Not really. Does it make you strive to be a better person? No. Does it have plenty of snakes on a plane? Absolutely. And for summer popcorn fare that's more than enough for a thrilling good time.

"WORLD TRADE CENTER"

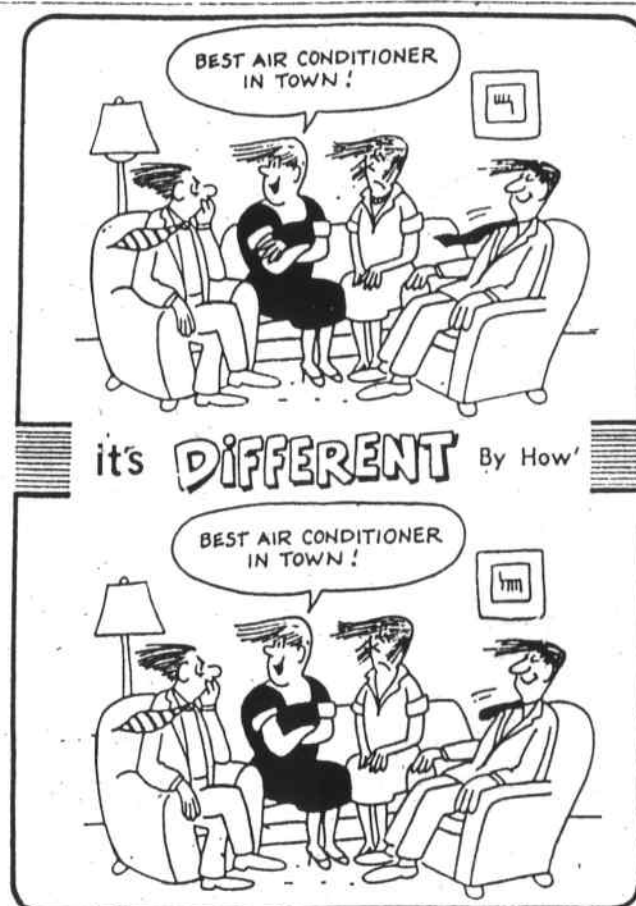

GRADE: ****

Oliver Stone's "JFK" turned the talented director into America's most famous conspiracy theorist, a reputation that raised some red flags when he announced he would direct "World Trade Center."

But "World Trade Center" is no "JFK." No character openly questions whether the American government undertook the attacks, that no plane hit the Pentagon or that the World Trade Center buildings collapsed so quickly because they were wired with explosives.

"World Trade Center" also isn't another "Fahrenheit 9/11," either. This is one of the few times in his career Stone avoids politics. Al Qaeda is never mentioned. The two main characters, New York Transit Authority police officers McLoughlin (Nicolas Cage) and Will Jimeno (Michael Peña), don't realize that terrorists attacked America.

If they do, they never talk about it. They have something more important to worry about: staying alive. "World Trade Center" is about heroism and about how the worst circumstances can bring out the best in people.

McLoughlin and Jimeno, real New York City residents, were among the police officers, fire fighters and paramedics who were in the World Trade Center when the twin towers collapsed. Two other members of their team were killed instantly. The final man, Dominick Pezzula (Jay Hernandez), survived the collapse of the first tower, but not the second.

"World Trade Center" is the second major film about the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, following Paul Greengrass' "United 93" by three months. "United 93" is the more compelling film, largely because it unfolds in real time, but "World Trade Center" is a wothy remembrance. Each film views the Sept. 11 tragedy through people pulled into the events as they happen, but they show the day from different angles. "United 93" was about what happened in the air, while "World Trade Center" is about what happened on, and under, the ground.

After the World Trade Center buildings implode, McLoughlin and Jimeno are immobilized and buried in rubble. Cage and Peña deserve high praise for revealing so much about their characters with only their heads and shoulders visible.

Stone concentrates on how these men drive each other to survive, while their wives (Bello and Maggie Gyllenhaal) fear they are no longer alive. A striking thing about McLoughlin and Jimeno's story is what they talk about during the 23 hours before their rescue. And what they do not.

They talk about their children. They talk about how much they love their wives. They talk about how much they love their job. They talk about their religious faith. They do not talk about the meaning of life.

About the Towns

GOOD STUFF HAPPENS TOO

Plaza sweet in Wilmington

"Get ready for a brand new Wilmington Plaza," notes the "Wilmington Town Crier."

"DeMoulas Supermarkets, Inc., is planning a major renovation of Wilmington Plaza, which will include the demolition of the current structure. In order to avoid interruptions in business, a new building, roughly matching the dimensions of the existing structure, will be built directly behind the familiar building. Additionally, plans call for three additional buildings to be built on the property."

"A building will be constructed on the north side of the property (closest to Bill Dube Hyundai) to house CVS and the main building and the other to be located on the south side of the property, will be constructed with the intention of housing banks."

"The main building, according to preliminary sketches, will feature Market Basket on the south end of the building - a near mirror image to its current location on the north end. Those same preliminary sketches of the proposed main building show TJ Maxx in Market Basket's current location."

"The finished product will result in an overall increase of between 6,000 and 7,000 square feet of retail space."

"The parking lot configuration will change substantially and will include a significant increase in landscaping, including a raised berm, similar to the berm across the street in front of Carmart Subaru."

"Wilmington's Planning Board got its first look at the supermarket giant's proposed plans. The plans had not yet gone through the town's Community Development Team Review process yet, so Director of Planning and Conservation Carole Hamilton recommended that meeting be used simply as an opportunity for the Planning Board, and the public, to digest the information presented by DeMoulas Supermarkets, Inc."

"Wilmington Plaza is not the only property in that immediate area of Route 38 preparing for construction. Two sizeable properties directly across the street have big plans...."

Simply love from Reading

"USTA New England, one of 17 regional sections across the country that comprise the United States Tennis Association (USTA), recently inducted Russ Adams, from Reading, along with five other New Englanders into its Hall of Fame," notes the Reading edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"The ceremony was held at the International Tennis Hall of Fame in Newport, R.I."

"Adams is a veteran tennis photographer who has shot the pros internationally for more than 53 years. From Evonne Goolagong to Steffi Graf, from Jimmy Connors to Boris Becker, he has taken

1.6 million photographs over the span of his career. A former photographer for the Worcester Telegram & Gazette and the Boston Herald, he revolutionized Grand Slam photography by suggesting photographers be granted on-court access to shoot the matches, starting at the US Open. In 2002, he was the only photographer to ever be nominated for induction into the International Tennis Hall of Fame."

"Established in 1990, the USTA New England Hall of Fame exists to recognize those tennis players and non-players in New England whose achievements as sportsmen or sportswomen are worthy of the highest commendation and recognition, or whose contributions as officials or individuals in some tennis-related activity have been so outstanding over a significant period of time as to justify the highest commendation and recognition. Past inductees include Bud Collins (1990), James H. Van Alen (1995), Tim Mayotte (1996), Sheila Weinstock (2002), and William S. Packer (2004). For a complete list of inductees and to view the USTA New England Hall of Fame induction criteria, log on to www.USTANewEngland.com and click on 'Awards/Hall of Fame.'

"An additional award will be given to Art Goldblatt from Norwalk, Conn., during the 2006 USTA New England Hall of Fame Ceremony, the Gardner Ward Chase Memorial Award. This award is given annually to an individual who has made an outstanding contribution to tennis in New England during his or her lifetime. It is one of the highest honors an individual can receive from USTA New England...."

Funding on the horizon for Wakefield

"Representatives Mark Falzone, Michael Festa, and Senator Richard Tisei have successfully moved through the Massachusetts Legislature the funding for several major projects in the Town of Wakefield," notes the Wakefield edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"These projects passed both the House and the Senate in the economic stimulus and capital supplemental appropriations bills and only await the Governor's signature for assurance that Wakefield will receive these significant dollars."

"Projects for Wakefield in these measures include a minimum of $500,000 for a grant for the cleanup of Lake Quannapowitt, including its shorelines, bank, buffer zone, and land in the vicinity; $50,000 for conducting a study to alleviate the parking and public safety problems at the Northeast Metropolitan Regional Vocational School, Wakefield High School and the Woodville School; $50,000 for repairs and renovations to the historic Hartshorne House; and $30,000 for a feasibility study conducted by Wakefield and Lynnfield for recreational pathways abutting Reedy Meadows.

"Representative Falzone noted, 'I am very pleased with the priorities represented in the significant state expenditures for these important projects because I believe they reflect both legislative priorities and the preference of Wakefield residents."

"These state funds also help take the pressure off of the property tax and fees. I am particularly heartened that the hard work of the entire Wakefield legislative delegation has successfully added important amenities that will enhance the quality of life for the residents of Wakefield, protect our environmental and historical heritage, add to our outstanding recreational resources, and improve public safety at our schools...."

IT'S THE PRINCIPALS AND PRINCIPLES

'Absolutely thrilled' (Tewksbury)

"This fall, the Heath Brook School will welcome a new face to the surroundings," notes the "Tewksbury Town Crier."

"Mrs. Rosamond Dorrance was recently appointed as the new principal following the retirement of Pauline King."

"I'm absolutely thrilled. It's a wonderful opportunity for me," said Dorrance.

"Currently, Dorrance is a fourth grade teacher at the Trahan School, and she said first and foremost are the 27 children in Room #7."

"They're wonderful," said Dorrance.

"This group will be unique to other students in Tewksbury; they will be the only students to have had her as a teacher."

"I told them you're my first class, my last class, and my only class at the Trahan," said Dorrance.

"Once the school year commences, Dorrance says, she will concentrate on the future challenges of being a principal."

"The focus has always been helping teachers deal with the awesome responsibility they face everyday, and improving the life of every single student in that room," she said.

"In addition, Dorrance said her agenda also includes working closely with all of the parents of the Heath Brook. In her words, Dorrance said the parents are the most important element for a child's success."

"Before becoming the fourth grade teacher at the Trahan, Dorrance spent five years serving as the Coordinator of the Elementary Challenge Program, a program designed for students with academic talents. In addition, she is the Co-leader of the Mentor Program for new teachers, was part of many Subject Area Review Committees, and presented to faculty and administration on differentiated instruction...."

"Dorrance says she has one piece of advice for parents of young children: 'Enjoy them while they are young, it goes so fast.'"

"Mrs. Rosamond Dorrance has lived in Wilmington for twenty-seven years with her husband Stephen and three children, Elizabeth, Emily and Erin. She holds a Bachelor of Science Degree in Education from Boston State College. She received her Masters Degree from Harvard University in Education and School Administration."

'Pretty adamant' (Burlington)

"The Planning Board voted to approve a site plan waiver for the placement of portable classrooms on the grounds of the Fox Hill School," notes the Burlington edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"The vote was 6-0, Ann Cummings was absent due to illness."

"The classrooms, already on the grounds at the schools, will be located next to the pod on the right side of the building."

"School officials say the temporary classrooms are needed to deal with elementary enrollment issues pending what they hope will be the construction of a new Memorial School."

"The portables will be connected to the school building, explained Director of Operations and Finance Craig Robinson."

"The School Committee is pretty adamant, they want it connected," he stated.

"There will be four Grade 4 classrooms in the portables. Students will go into the main building for lunch and for specialized instruction, explained Robinson."

"The four units, about 2,400 square feet each, will be combined into one building, stated Robinson. The portables will be placed on piers sunk into the ground."

"In response to a question, Robinson said the best-case scenario for a new Memorial would be an opening for the 2009-2010 school year...."

'Horried' (Winchester)

"When a gay teacher, a transgendered woman and a gay woman spoke at a Winchester High School assembly recently, at least two parents were horrified by the school's decision," notes the Winchester Daily Chronicle.

"We will not stand for this type of information being shared with our kids at school," said Winchester resident Mike Rotondi and his wife in an e-mail. Rotondi's 15-year-old son is a student at WHS.

"The controversial assembly was hosted by Spectrum, the high school's Gay-Straight Alliance. It took place during Pride Week."

"Spectrum students felt that the school should have a day of dialogue with follow-up discussions to reinforce that Winchester supports its members of the gay community," said principal Thomas Gwin.

"Gwin said he supported the assembly as an attempt to show the respect for diversity, promote tolerance, and to ensure that everyone feels valued in the school community."

"The purpose was to educate students about differences so we can eliminate or decrease stereotyping," he said in an e-mail.

"Three speakers spoke at the assembly - a gay woman, gay biology teacher Michelle White, and a transgendered woman."

"A transgendered person, someone who identifies with their gender differently than others, might have surgery to physically take the form of the opposite sex. The person might then be defined as a transsexual."

"I felt the speakers did a nice job," said Gwin. "They briefly talked about growing up, realizing they were different, and how they dealt with it. I really did not see anything controversial in what they had to say."

5TH ANNUAL WALK OF HOPE FOR ALS

The annual Walk of Hope for ALS will be held on Saturday, September 9.

This 3.5 mile walk around Lake Quannapowitt in Wakefield is a family event, hosted by The Angel Fund, an independent nonprofit charity. Registration begins at 9 a.m. at the lower common on Main Street. It begins at 11 a.m. The mission is to raise funds benefiting ALS (Lou Gehrig's Disease) research at the Cecil B. Day Neuromuscular Laboratory at Massachusetts General Hospital, where Dr. Robert H. Brown, Jr. has made tremendous strides to find a cure.

Please request pledges from family, friends, co-workers or neighbors. Ask sponsors to find out if their employers will provide matching gifts or pledges, an increasingly vital resource that helps double, triple or even quadruple an individual's contribution. Finally, try to build a team of walkers.

A team can be comprised of any group of co-workers, fellow students, religious/civic organization members, friends or family members that pre-register, raise money and walk together on the day of the event.

Forming a team is a powerful morale builder, a time for meaningful camaraderie outside of the work or school environment and a great reason for friends and family groups to get together and show support for those living with ALS, or to walk in memory of loved ones.

If unable to walk September 9, you may send a tax deductible contribution, made payable to The Angel Fund, 649 Main Street, Wakefield, Ma. 01880 or on line at www.theangelfund.org.

Protecting kids in cyberspace

The internet is like a vast city, full of virtual shops, museums, theaters, recreational activities and like a real city, there are certain places online where children shouldn't visit alone.

A recent study conducted by the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children revealed several startling facts about Internet users between the ages of ten and seventeen:

- One in five children is inappropriately or sexually solicited on the internet;
- One in 33 children receives an aggressive sexual solicitation, or a message from someone who asks to meet them in real life, calls them on the phone or sends them mail, money or gifts;
- One in four children has unwanted exposure to pictures of nudity or sexual images;
- One in 17 children is threatened or harassed online; and

• Less than ten percent of sexual solicitations and only three percent of sexual exposure episodes are reported to authorities.

A similar study conducted by the Crimes Against Children Research Center indicates that young girls are more likely than boys to have cyber pals, which puts them at risk of being contacted and romanced by sexual predators in internet chat rooms and other similar web communities.

Modern parents often feel overwhelmed by these complicated, high-tech issues and need someone to help make sense of it all and show them how to keep up with their cyber savvy children.

Pooling the knowledge of its national network of certified technicians, Geeks on Call has developed a special Kids Club that offers educational materials to parents and schools to help promote internet safety for children.

At the core of the Kids Club program is a free publication titled "A Parents Guide to Internet Safety," which is designed to provide parents with simple, practical ways to protect their children and how to be actively involved in their kids digital lives.

The guide divides the subject of internet into two categories: personal safety for chil-

Quality time for parents

A new national poll contradicts the conventional wisdom that teenagers just want their parents to "leave them alone."

Up to 67 percent of America's teens say they actually want to spend more time with their parents - that's according to an online survey of 1,250 adults and teens conducted by the Opinion Research Corporation.

Nearly half of the teens who responded said they would be happier and better adjusted if they were able to spend more time with their parents or other adult caregivers, such as grandparents, aunts, uncles or adults outside the family.

"While most make it through adolescence without excessive stress, teenagers are at greater risk of school dropout, arrest, drug use, and some psychological disorders than other age groups," explained Dr. Holly Kreider, a research associate with the Harvard Family Research Project at the Graduate School of Education.

"This is when they need engaged adults in their lives, to help separate the good from the bad and to know that they have a chance for a great future ahead of them."

The survey shows what some say is a clear disconnect in a number of American families. While nearly a quarter of teen respondents said their parents don't seem to have enough time to spend with them, the majority of the parents surveyed did not report having struggles with finding enough time to spend with their kids. Dr. Kreider says this disconnect may be the result of parents underestimating the amount of time that their children want and need from adults.

But parents are faced with many demands for their time, ranging from careers, to their own hobbies and activities, to potentially caring for their own adult parents - all things that can take away from the time they might otherwise spend with their kids.

So how can a parent achieve more quality time with a teen?

Dr. Kreider, who has worked extensively on programs that strengthen parent involvement and engagement, advises parents to seek out local family

Treating hearing loss

There's good news for parents who have a child born with significant hearing loss. Advances in technology are making it possible to address profound hearing loss in children as young as 12 months of age.

Approximately one out of every 1,000 newborns in the United States - about 33 babies each day - is born profoundly deaf.

Fortunately, there are treatment alternatives. Cochlear implants, for example, are small, complex, implantable electronic devices that restore hearing by bypassing the damaged or malformed parts of the ear to directly stimulate the auditory nerve and may be beneficial to those who cannot resources. She has served as an advisor to Boy and Girls Clubs of America (BGCA) an organization that she says has recognized and responded to the needs of parents, with local assistance in strengthening families.

In particular, BGCA's Family PLUS (Parents Leading, Uniting Serving) Initiative, which is funded from a $7 million grant from the Kimberly-Clark Corporation, provides family bonding activities and resources in local communities to help families become more stable, cohesive and connected.

More information is available by logging onto www.bgca.org/programs/specialized.asp

There's more good news for parents. Teens say it's simple things - like taking walks, sharing meals, playing games, and watching television together - that they most want to do more of with their parents.

They also say - and parents agree - that they'd like to spend more time as a family planning for the future.

"It may be surprising to many parents that teens don't expect lavish getaways just for family time, but rather that they would much rather have the quality time at home," said Kreider.

"This should open the doors for many parents who were hesitant to ask their teen if they'd like to do something around the house together or go out to see a movie."

J & D Dance returns from NY

The faculty of the J&D Dance Academy of Reading recently returned from New York City where they attended the Dance Teachers Summer Conference, held at the New York Hilton.

This event was attended by more than 700 dance teachers from all over the nation. Owner and Director Deanna Carpinteri and teacher Debi Cocco attended master classes with some of the top teachers in the country.

The conference provided the dance instructors with an array of opportunities, including taking classes from cast member and Broadway dancer Cara Cooper where Carpinteri learned original choreography from "The Wedding Singer," which is currently showing on Broadway.

A highlight of the trip was meeting with keynote speaker, Mia Michaels, judge and choreographer for the Fox Television network's show "So You Think You Can Dance."

Cocco was among those selected to attend a class with Michaels.

The instructors also met with Nick Lazzarini and Melody Lacayanga, the winner and runner up from the first season of "So You Think You Can Dance." A private and up-close performance was given by these two talented dancers at the Capezio Dancewear store.

After such an inspirational and educational experience, the staff at J&D Dance Academy of Reading is now preparing to dance into their tenth season, which gets underway on September 18.

The J&D Dance Academy is located at 11 Sanborn Street in Reading. Contact the studio via e-mail at janddanceacademy@comcast.net hear or understand speech well with a hearing aid.

One of the latest developments in cochlear implant technology is the HiResolution

Experts say that people with cochlear implants can hold normal conversations, hear in noisy environments such as restaurants, use the telephone, work, participate in sports, attend school and even play musical instruments.

Early screening and implementation of a hearing device, such as a cochlear implant, have medical, financial and social benefits.

"Cochlear implants, coupled with auditory therapy, can help young children more quickly acquire the speech, language and social skills needed to successfully mainstream into regular classrooms with their normal-hearing peers," explained Patricia Trautwein Au.D., director of auditory education and training for Advanced Bionics.

Nearly half of all cochlear implant recipients are children. Children benefit the most from a cochlear implant when their hearing loss is detected in its beginning stages and they receive early intervention and treatment.

Adult candidates for a cochlear implant are most often those who are post-lingually deaf in both ears. These Bionic Ear System. Developed by Advanced Bionics Corporation, the Neuromodulation Group of Boston Scientific Corporation, it is described as the only cochlear implant system that can provide HiResolution sound, which is designed to enhance the fine details of sound to stimulate a more natural hearing nerve response in both children with profound hearing loss and in adults with severe or profound hearing loss.

Potential advantages of the cochlear implant include better distance hearing, comfortable loudness growth and clearer, more understandable speech. Individuals typically receive limited benefit from hearing aids.

Time-saving solutions

It's enough to make harried parents dread the return of the big yellow bus. To get their kids ready for the 2006-2007 school year, it's not enough that they have to find the perfect backpack, clothes and supplies - they also have to at least try to make sure that all of those news purchases don't get lost before winter break.

"Let's face it - parents have less time today than ever before," said Amy Lipton, a mom, organizational consultant and CEO of Stuck on You. "One of the biggest challenges that parents face when getting ready for school is keeping track of personal belongings."

Lipton, who's worked with hundreds of schools and day care centers across the nation to develop her line of personalized labeling products for school-age children, has heard the same issues from parents time and time again.

Four of Lipton's most popular products address what she's found to be the key concerns of parents of children heading back to the classroom.

Clothing Crises - To be sure that everyone knows which items belong to your child, Stuck on You developed Clothing Tattoos which are permanent iron-on transfers which are available in white, blue or pink. These labels are great for identifying children's school clothing, especially uniforms which all look alike, and they adhere directly to fabric so they don't irritate the skin.

Allergen Alerts - For parents who have children with food or environmental allergies, each new school year brings with it challenges and dangers. The best way to avoid potentially deadly allergy attacks is information.

Allergy-free zone labels - "Nut-Free Zone," "Dairy-Free Zone," and "Egg-Free Zone" - alert caretakers to keep certain products away from allergen-sensitive little ones. Each is dishwasher and microwave safe and special labels with health-related messages can be custom ordered.

Lost Bags - Available in 18 different designs and five colors, Stuck on You's Bag Tags allow children to express their individuality while helping you spot your child's pack at a glance.

Subject Confusion - Keeping track of your child's school work makes everything from homework time to rounding up sick-day assignments a great deal easier. Bright and cheerful subject labels let parents peel and stick 16 different easily identifiable labels on notebooks, binders and folders.

For more information on back-to-school and other personalized items from Stuck on You, go online and visit www.stuckonyou.biz or call 888-236-2800 for a free brochure.

Meet Bill

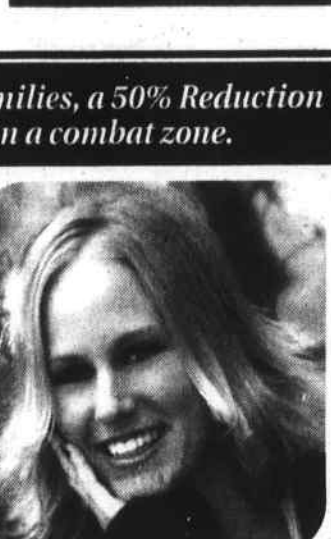

Bill is a kind, sensitive and curious boy of Latino and Caucasian descent with a willingness to try new things. He enjoys drawing and playing board games and cards. One of Bill's favorite activities is cooking, especially breakfast. Bill wants to attend culinary school and become a personal chef when he grows up. He also likes sports, especially basketball. Bill would love the opportunity to join a permanent family who will give him the guidance he still needs.

Currently living at a residential home, Bill is proud of achieving the highest level for his behavior and cooperation. He can be shy at first, but is usually friendly and outgoing. He describes himself as nice and helpful, and he is willing to pitch in with household chores.

A bright and articulate 13-year-old, Bill attends school at his residential home and is working at a fifth grade level in his small classroom. He does best during structured time and freely asks for help when needed. Math is his strongest subject, and he is working on improving his written language skills.

Bill tends to be a perfectionist and can be hard on himself sometimes. He is a child who has suffered trauma in his life and utilizes therapy and the supports available to him. Bill has come to have good insight into his feelings and has made great strides in trusting that the right adoptive family will keep him safe and secure.

Bill will benefit from a family who will encourage him and help him to build up his self-esteem. He would do well with a single mom or two-parent family who will provide him with a loving, consistent and predictable environment. It is important to Bill that he maintains contact with his twin sister. Legally free for adoption, Bill is ready to find a forever home where he will continue to feel safe and thrive.

To learn more about Bill, or about adoption in general, please call the Massachusetts Adoption Resource Exchange (MARE) at 617-54-ADOPT (617-542-3678) or 1-800-882-1176. Turn your grill into a backyard smokehouse

Sizzling flames on a grill and the familiar aroma of a barbecue are welcome signs that it's grilling season. Smoking meats, a great alternative to the basic cookout, is just as much fun for the outdoor cooking aficionado as it is for the weekend backyard griller.

Smoking meats is a relatively simple technique that can be performed in the comfort of your own backyard and the end result will make it seem as though you're an expert griller.

The following tips are sure to make for perfect smoked meat:

- Select wood chips for the flavor you desire, such as mesquite or hickory.
- Soak wood chips in water for at least thirty minutes before smoking.
- After preheating the grill to high or preparing the charcoal, drain the woodchip and place them inside a smoker box or aluminum pan.
- Cover the grill after placing the meat of your choice on the rack.
- During the process be sure to add new chips as needed.

Open the grill only as necessary and maintain the grill's low heat to achieve the optimal smokiness.

By following these easy steps, outdoor chefs can prepare an array of recipes in their own backyard.

Ribs are an all-American barbecue staple and can be prepared in a number of ways. Smokehouse ribs are spiced up with a marinade that blends the traditional ingredients of brown sugar and garlic powder, with a hearty splash of Tabasco chipotle pepper sauce. Slow smoking the ribs makes the meat both flavorful and tender and is sure to keep everyone coming back for more.

If you're in the mood for beef but wish to shake things up a bit from the typical burgers and steaks, try your hand at Chili Beef Brisket. In this mouthwatering recipe, the flavorful brisket is coated with a zesty mop sauce that is infused with Worcestershire sauce and original Tabasco pepper sauce. Kaiser rolls are optional, so you can slice the brisket for a hearty sandwich or serve larger portions for a main dish for lunch or dinner.

This recipe can also be served with a side salad and grilled vegetables.

Locals don't have to venture out to a restaurant or specialty shop to enjoy the savory flavor of smoked meats. By smoking them at home, backyard chefs can easily turn the barbecue into a makeshift smokehouse.

What's your hair IQ?

How do you care for your hair? What hair products are right for your tresses? If you don't know, you're not alone - a recent hair care survey by Impulse Research found that many women make hair mistakes, so the following tips are sure to prove quite useful to people of all ages.

Long Hair Care

Fifty-three percent of women surveyed have hair that's longer than shoulder-length and 55 percent had the same style for more than one year. To keep your hair looking great and feeling healthy, or if you're looking for a new style, consider these tips:

- Regis Salons stylists recommend a quarter-inch trim every five weeks to prevent damage caused by split ends.
- Cutting layers into long hair gives it shape and manageability. Adding fringe creates softness and definition while providing more styling options.
- Highlights and lowlights create texture and dimension without cutting layers.

That's Hot

Even though 75 percent of women use heat styling tools such as curling irons and hair dryers, only 16 percent use thermal protection products regularly. Thermal protection products like Regis designLINE Get It Pressed Flat Iron Spray, prevent hair from sustaining heat damage.

Sixty-five percent said that they use a blow dryer on a daily basis. Here are a few things to look for when purchasing a new dryer:

- Ionic blow-dryers reduce drying time to eliminate frizz and add body.

- A cooler setting or "cold shot" on blow-dryers is used to set a style once hair is dry.

- Stylists from MasterCuts, a family-oriented salon, recommend adding a diffuser to enhance curls and create volume and texture.

Pick a Product

The right product can add volume, hold, shine or curls. A stylist at a product-focused salon such as Trade Secret can help you identify your hair type and find the products that are best for your locks. Be sure to follow these guidelines:

- The heavier and coarser your hair, the heavier the product needs to be. Gel is great for supporting heavy hair and pomade and wax separate and define your style.

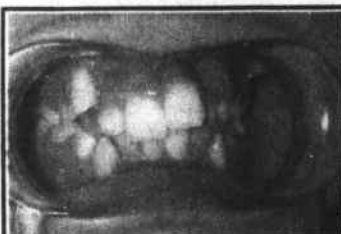

- If you have fine or medium texture hair, choose a lightweight product. Mousse provides definition and support and it's a lighter styling option than gel or pomade.

- Hairspray comes in an array of strengths, from flexible to firm holds, and works with any hairstyle.

- Shine and smoothing serums add sheen to hair while controlling frizz. They come in a variety of weights so there's a formula for each and every hair type.

Utility blades

When repairing and improving your home, anything less than a good utility knife and blade just won't cut it.

A quality utility blade is a must for tackling home repair and maintenance projects. Investing in a good blade and knife can make the difference between a botched job and a professional result.

Bathroom and kitchen repairs offer an opportunity to test the strength of a new utility blade and knife. A good blade can remove excess caulk, strip grout, strip electrical wire, repair holes in the wall and cut dry-wall.

Insulating or reinsulating a home is another popular repair project that benefits from the use of a strong utility blade. When shopping for a utility knife and blade, look for one that has four notches, which permit greater blade extension from the knife and makes cutting through thick insulation quick and easy.

For example, the shatter-proof construction of the Lenox Gold bi-metal utility blade and knife allows for a safer cutting as well as longer-lasting blades.

Superior cutting ability is a function of the blade's bi-metal construction, which fuses two different types of steel together to get the performance benefits of both. The blades are also the first to feature a titanium nitride-coated edge, which doubles edge hardness, making it the longest-lasting utility blade ever made.

Blades

from S-12

Utility blades and knives are also very helpful for craft and hobby projects. The many uses include cutting fabric, corrugated cardboard, mats for framing, wires, foam board, paper or upholstery - just to mention a few.

A strong blade stays sharper, making it easier to make precise cuts, which is vital in the success of many projects. A strong blade is also a safer blade. It takes less force to cut through an object with a sharp blade and it gives you greater control of the knife.

Choosing a bi-metal utility blade and knife for a project not only leads to better results, but it can also prove to be a safer and more time-efficient option. The versatility of a bi-metal utility blade proves it worthy of a space in your home toolbox.

FALL ADULT-ONLY DUDE RANCHES

Guest ranches are ever popular as family vacation destinations, but members of the Dude Ranchers' Association recognize that adults also value time to themselves.

As a result, more and more guest ranches are offering special adult-only programs, says Colleen Hodson, executive director of the Dude Ranchers' Association in Cody, Wyoming.

"At least forty percent of our member ranches set aside the time for adults," Hodson says. "It's definitely a growing trend in ranch vacations."

Some ranches set aside a month, others a week and most all are held in the spring or fall. "Fall is an ideal time to visit,"

Hodson says. "Not only to take in the season's colors, but because the summer crowds are gone."

For a complete listing of ranches that offer adult-only programs or to request a free catalog, call 866-399-2339, e-mail info@dude-ranch.org or visit www.dude-ranch.org.

Accomplished performers will be on hand to entertain patrons. They will include local talents along with surprise guests.

Who cares? Wilmington C.A.R.E.S.

By JAYNE W. MILLER

WILMINGTON - Secret Learning. Definition: give students fun activities that encourage creativity, ingenuity, and decision making and kids will not even know that they are learning at the same time.

Secret learning is the name of the game for the Wilmington School Department's innovative C.A.R.E.S. program. A before and after school program, C.A.R.E.S. offers Wilmington students in Kindergarten through fifth grades a strong variety of activities that appeal to all kids. Incorporating sports, arts, computer time and homework help within the program aids children in exploring forms of education not always available in a traditional classroom setting.

"We provide a really safe environment for the kids, a home away from home. It's very caring," said C.A.R.E.S. Director Jeanne Noonan. "It's well beyond babysitting."

C.A.R.E.S. stands for Children's Art, Recreation and Enrichment Services. The program, supported 100 percent by tuition, operates in the six elementary schools and early learning centers in Wilmington. Originally patronized by children with working parents, the program has earned cachet throughout the student body for the interesting activities and camaraderie provided.

About ten years ago a national organization emerged with a standard for quality school-age before and after school programs. That organization, the National After School Association (www.naaweb.org), provided a basis for the Wilmington program. After seven years with C.A.R.E.S., Noonan still looks to the organization for guidance and best practices. The NAA also offers accreditation and recently redesigned its accreditation program, but as the Wilmington program is already part of a school system it does not require licensing.

Last year 359 children participated in the before and after school programs, as well as Kindergarten C.A.R.E.S., a day program rounding out a full day schedule offered through a lottery.

"One thing that is so unique about the after school program - it really is a continuation of their education," commented Noonan. "We incorporate story time, drama, we go look for bugs; that's science. Deciding the rules of games, compromising over cooking projects, playing board games; these are life lessons."

Registration for Fall 2006 officially ended June 30 but parents interested in enrolling students should contact Jeanne Noonan or program assistant Paula Samatis through the Wilmington Superintendent's office at (978)694-6000. For already registered students, C.A.R.E.S. begins on the first day of school. Those registering now will have a delayed start of September 11 in order to complete the necessary paperwork.

C.A.R.E.S. also offers a vacation program, available to all K-5 students, for February, April and summer vacations. Program information is available through the website at www.wilmington.k12.ma.us.
